It was agreed that pltf. would purchase the wheat from A. at a price which was equal to the amount of A.'s indebtedness to pltf., & pltf. would immediately re-sell it to A. at a price per bushel which made the total price at about the same as on pltf.'s purchase. This was carried out, & A. secured the purchase price pltf. took from A. a seed grain mtge. on the crop to be grown.—Held: as A. did not require the whole of the wheat for seed, & as the price fixed had no relation to the value of the wheat but was fixed with reference to the debt owing by A. to pltf., the actual value being much less than the price agreed on, the transaction could not be considered a bona fide sale to A., & pltf.'s mtge. was invalid.—*LYNCH v. Pltf. accordingly received a cheque for £1,000 from defts., & after receiving it she executed the second bill of sale, which stated that the consideration for it was £1,000 paid to pltf. In an action by pltf. to restrain defts. from disposing of the furniture comprised in the second bill of sale, pltf. relied on 1882 Act, s. 8, & she contended that the real consideration was the payment off of the money-was executed, & the money was paid over by claimant at substantially the same time; the bill was therefore valid & the appeal must be dismissed.—HENSHALL v. (1923), 130 L. T. 607, D. C.

— — — — —]—Pltf., H., had had a number of betting transactions with deft., W., a book-maker, since 1918. Pltf. lost various bets & paid his losses by cheques. He won other bets for which he was paid by various cheques. Eventually, pltf. obtained judgment against deft. for £692 10s. Execution was levied at the instance of the judgment creditor where-upon deft.'s wife, claimant in the interpleader proceedings which followed, claimed the goods seized, alleging that they belonged to her because her husband, the judgment debtor, had given her a bill of sale covering them to secure the repayment of a sum of £600 which she had advanced to him. The judgment creditor contended that the bill of sale was bad because it did not truly state the consideration. The bill of sale contained the words "In consideration of a sum of £600 now paid . . ." & the judgment creditor said that the £600 was not paid at the time of making the bill of sale, & therefore was not "now paid," as therein stated, but was paid some time later. It was therefore contended that the bill of sale was not a good bill of sale because the statement that the money was "now paid" was untrue. According to the evidence, deft.'s wife had borrowed the £600 from her mother to help her husband, & she handed the £600 over to her husband to pay his debts at 6 p.m., on the same day that the bill of sale was executed:—Held: there was evidence in the present case on which the county ct. judge could find that the £600 was "now paid" within the meaning of the statement in the bill; the bill of sale a bill of sale of furniture is granted to secure a loan of money with an agreed sum for interest, & the bill is found to be bad, the lender is entitled to recover the principal money lent & interest by virtue of the contract created by the oral negotiations which preceded the granting of the bill of sale.—v. D. subsequently executed in favour of deft. another bill of sale over certain farm implements acquired "ince the first bill of sale. Upon the sale of these implements the Crown claimed the proceeds on the ground that upon their acquisition they became subject to the security of the Crown. Dft. was aware that the Crown held a chattel security, but believed it comprised other chattels than those contained in his security :—Held : the title acquired by the Crown was equitable only, & since deft. acquired a good title at law for value & without notice of the special provision in the Crown's security, the legal title prevailed over the equitable title; &

830a. — — —.]—In June, 1921, a bill of sale, which was duly registered, was given to secure £400 with interest at 24 per cent. per annum. An agreement was afterwards made by which the present claimant agreed with the grantor of the bill of sale to pay to the grantee £450 then owing thereon & to lend to the grantor a further sum of £550 upon having the payment of these sums, making together £1,000 with interest thereon, secured by a transfer of the £450 then owing on the bill of sale & the securities for the same. Subsequently, in Nov. 1921, a deed was made between the parties to the bill of sale & claimant, by which, in pursuance of the agreement & in consideration of £450 then paid to the grantee of the bill of sale by claimant, the grantee assigned to claimant the principal & interest secured by the bill of sale & all securities therefor, & the grantee also at the request of the grantor assigned to claimant the goods comprised in the bill of sale free from all equity of redemption under the bill of sale, but subject to a proviso for redemption in the deed, & the grantor covenanted with claimant to pay to her on a specified date the £1,000 with interest at 6 per cent. per annum. The latter deed was not registered as a bill of sale under the Bills of Sale Acts:—Held: the deed was not a "transfer or assignment" of the registered bill of sale within 1878 Act, s. 10, but was a new bill of sale which itself required to be registered &, therefore, claimant was not entitled to rely upon the registered bill of sale as assignee thereof.—MARSHALL & SNELGROVE, LTD. v. - 171a. ———.]—Ptfs. were incorporated under Canvey Island (Sea Defences) Act, 1883, for protecting Canvey Island from inundation by the sea. They succeeded former comrs. appointed by an Act of 1792 (32 Geo. 3, c. 31), which contained a power for these comrs. under s. 13 to erect a new sea wall further inward, on giving compensation to the owner whose land was taken for this purpose. In 1813 the new wall was built, & £150 given as compensation to the owner of the land taken. Under the Act of 1883 the property & rights of the former comrs. were vested in ptfs. who had power under that Act to hold lands. Ptfs. claimed to be owners in possession of the foreshore between the new & the old wall. Deft. claimed under a conveyance of Apr. 1919 to be the freeholder in possession of a strip of land comprising part of this foreshore, & to be entitled as of right to excavate & remove shells & other drift even although, as ptfs. alleged, it deprived the new wall of protection & support, & exposed it to injury by the action of wind & water. The greater risk to the wall in consequence of deft.'s action was established by the evidence. In an action by ptfs. to restrain deft. from so removing the drift, & from trespassing on their land:—Held: (1) assuming the strip in question to be deft.'s freehold, ptfs. were still entitled to an injunction restraining him from so removing drift from the strip as to expose their wall & works & the lands protected thereby to greater risk of inundations of the sea; (2) ptfs. had established their statutory title under the Acts of 1792

230a. — Excess of cost of completion over contract price.—By a contract in writing dated May 12, 1916, deft. agreed to build for pltf. a house, subject to the conditions set forth in the schedule thereto, for the sum of £1,900. The conditions provided (inter alia) that deft. should begin the works immediately after possession of the site was given to him, & should regularly proceed with & complete the same within six months after the date of the plans being passed by the local authority, & that if deft. should suspend the works or should not proceed with them with due diligence, pltf. by his architect should have power to give notice to deft. requiring him to proceed, & on failure of deft. to comply with such notice for thirty days pltf. should be entitled to enter upon & take possession of the works & site & employ any other person to complete the works. On July 10, 1916, the plans were duly passed. On July 14, 1916, an order was made by the Minister of Munitions under the powers of the Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, which provided that on & after July 20, 1916, no person should without licence from the Minister of Munitions commence or carry on any building or construction work. On July 21 deft. applied for a licence to proceed, & continued to work fairly well until Aug. 12, when he ceased to proceed with due diligence with the deliberate intention, as the ct. held, of ensuring that the licence should be refused & that he should thereby be enabled to put an end to the contract. On Sept. 9 pltf.'s architect gave him thirty days' notice to proceed with the works. On Sept. 30, before the expiration of the notice, the Minister of Munitions refused to grant the licence to proceed. In an action by pltf. for damages for breach of contract:—Held: deft. could not take advantage of the intervention of the Minister of Munitions, which was brought about by his own act, & the proper measure of damages was what it cost pltf. to complete the house substantially as it was originally intended & in a reasonable manner at the earliest moment he was allowed to proceed with the work, less any amount that would have been due & payable to deft. by pltf., had deft. completed the house to the roofing-in at the time agreed by the terms of his contract. — *MERTENS v. She was to be constructed under the inspection of the purchasers' surveyor, to whose approval the quality of the material used & the workmanship were to be subject. Clause 6 provided that from & after payment by the purchasers to the builders of the first instalment on account of the price the vessel & all materials & things appropriated for her should thenceforth, subject to the lien of the builders for unpaid purchase-money including extras, become & remain the absolute property of the purchasers. After the first instalments of the purchase-money had been paid & the vessel had been partly constructed, a receiver was appointed in an action commenced by debenture-holders of the shipbuilding co. for enforcing their security :—Held : certain worked material lying in the yard ready to be incorporated into the hull of the vessel & approved by the purchasers' surveyor, had not been "appropriated for her" within the above clause so as to become the property of the purchasers.—*Re BLYTH SHIPBUILDING & DRY DOCKS Co., FORSTER v. Disputes having arisen regarding a claim by the contractors for compensation & extra payment, recourse was had to arbn. :—Held : (1) the arbitrator had jurisdiction to entertain the arbn., since the contractors' rights under the arbn. clause did not constitute a "legal" or "other remedy" for the debt within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 136 (1), & were not passed & transferred to the bank by the assignment; (2) the arbitrator had to consider not merely the terms of the contract within the limits of the document, but also the application & enforcement of those terms, having regard to the whole legal position which the parties had created, including the relinquishment by the contractors themselves by the assignment of their right to claim the debt, & he must make his award in favour of the building owners.—*COTTAGE CLUB ESTATES, LTD. v. 388a. Clause restricting time for opening reference—"Until after completion of works"—Meaning of.—The form of building contract issued by the Royal Institute of British Architects provides, by condition 31 in the schedule thereto, that should the building owner not pay the builder any sum certified by the architect within the time limited by the contract, the builder is to be at liberty to determine the contract & recover from the building owner payment for all work executed. Condition 32 provides that in case any difference shall arise between the building owner & the builder as to the construction of the contract or as to any matter arising thereunder, such difference is to be referred to arbn., but that "such reference . . . shall not be opened until after the completion of the works." During the progress of certain works which were being carried out under a building contract in the above form the building owner neglected to pay the builder a sum certified by the architect within the stipulated time, & thereupon the builder determined the contract under condition 31. The builder commenced arbn. proceedings while the contract works were still uncompleted, & the arbitrator made an award in his favour for the money due to him under the contract : Held : the words "until after the completion of the works" in condition 32 meant until after completion of the whole of the works contracted for, & not merely until after completion of so much of the works as the builder was under the circumstances bound to perform; consequently the arbn. was premature & the arbitrator had no jurisdiction to make the award; or at all events the validity of the award was sufficiently doubtful to render it improper to enforce it summarily.—*SMITH v. the completion of the contract to another engineer. A dispute having arisen as to the rate payable for the removal of certain rock, the contractors refused to continue the work, & the employers took the work out of their hands. An action having been brought by the contractors for payment of sums alleged to be due under the contract & for damages :—Held : as the work was still in progress, the first part of the arbn. clause applied, it being immaterial that the work had been taken out of the hands of the pursuers, & action sisted to allow the arbn. to proceed.—*CRAWFORD v. The Ministry of Health had the right to require the use of materials which the Disposals Board had for sale. Under these certificates & documents pltf's. had to pay both the builders & the Board for the same material. In an action by pltf's. to recover the amount from deft. on the ground of negligence:—Held: as the certificates were only interim certificates, & as deft. on going into the figures with pltf's. had indicated to them that the amount paid to the Disposals Board was to be deducted from the final balance due to the contractors, deft. had not been guilty of negligence, & the action failed—WISBECH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. WARD (1927), 44 T. L. R. 62; 91 J. P. Jo. 904, C. A.

- 230a. ——— Insufficient surplus funds to carry out purchase.—Although a building society may transfer its mtges either to an individual or to another building society, yet if it agrees to sell those securities to a purchaser & makes no stipulation as to what it is that the purchaser is to take under such agreement for sale, the only conclusion that can be drawn is that it agrees to transfer such benefits as it itself enjoys, & that it cannot do. Pltf. society was in liquidation, & in May, 1919, its liquidators entered into a contract with deft. society for the sale to deft. society of thirty-seven of the freehold & leasehold mtges. of pltf. society for £6,400. Deft. society having declined to complete, pltf. society issued a writ for specific performance. Subsequently the parties by agreement stated a special case for the opinion of the Ct. as to, amongst other things, whether the contract was ultra vires deft. society, because it had not at the date of the contract surplus funds properly available for investment, & whether pltf. society could transfer the mtges. without the consent of the mtgors. Both these points were decided in favour of pltf. society:—Held: (1) although
- the contract might be intra vires in its inception, notwithstanding that deft. society had not sufficient surplus funds to carry it out, yet if at the time when an order was made for its specific performance deft. society had not sufficient surplus funds the effect of the order would be to require the society, which was not an investing society, to invest moneys which were not its surplus funds in a security in which it had no power to invest them; (2) a further effect of the order, if made, would be to require deft. society to borrow money to pay for the mtges.; & as its borrowing powers could not be resorted to except for borrowing for the purposes of the society, & as the purchase of the mtges. was not one of those purposes, the order would be an order requiring deft. society to do an ultra vires act; therefore no order for specific performance ought in the circumstances to be made; (3) having regard to the fact that the mtges. in question were building society mtges., pltf. society was not in a position to transfer to deft. society all the rights & benefits to which under them it was itself entitled, pltf. society was not ready & willing to perform its part of the contract, & consequently it could not enforce the contract.—*SUN BUILDING SOCIETY v. 291a. ———.]—A parish council being the duly constituted burial authority for the parish took from pltf., in consideration of a covenant to redeem the tithe rentcharges charged on the land being conveyed & on adjoining land retained by pltf., a conveyance of land “to hold the same . . . according to the true intent & meaning” of the Burial Acts. The land proved unfit & was never used for interments, & it was never fenced off or consecrated, nor did it adjoin any burial ground. The council agreed with pltf., with the approval of the parish meeting, to exchange the land for other land suitable for use as a burial ground :—Held : (1) the land first acquired by the council had never been “set apart for the purposes of interment” & was not therefore a “disused burial ground,” so as to be subject to the restriction imposed by 1884 Act, s. 3 ; (2) the council had power to effect the exchange by virtue of the powers to sell land not required for interments & to buy land for the purposes of interment conferred respectively by 1852 Act, ss. 28 & 26, as extended by 1853 Act, s. 7.—*NICHOLL v. 300a. Urinal.]—A borough council petitioned for a faculty to authorise the conversion of a consecrated churchyard, which had been wholly closed for interments by Order in Council, into an open space, & the laying out & maintenance of it as such. Authority was sought for laying out & maintaining part of the churchyard as a playground for children & for the erection upon it of urinals & a small toolshed :—Held : (1) the proposed urinals were “buildings” within 1884 Act, s. 2, & Open Spaces Act, 1887 (c. 32), s. 4, & the ct. had no jurisdiction to authorise their erection ; (2) the proposed toolshed was necessary for the laying out & maintaining of the churchyard as an open space, & was not a “building” within the above Acts ; (3) the facts proved justified the authorisation of games in the converted churchyard, but organised games, such as cricket & football, the laying out of tennis courts & the erection of swings & other structures should be prohibited. Faculty decreed, but not to issue until the council had made bye-laws embodying the above prohibitions & prescribing the hours during which the churchyard should be open to the public, so as to prevent any nuisance to the occupants of adjoining houses, & had carried a copy thereof into the diocesan registry for approval by the chancellor.—*BERMONDSEY BOROUGH COUNCIL v. CARRIERS.

Part I.—Who is a Common Carrier.

- 4a. ———.—]—Defts., furniture removers & warehousemen, contracted to carry pltf.'s furniture from L. to H., the contract being subject to a condition that the contractors would not be responsible for loss or damage caused by fire. Part of the furniture, which was loaded on a motor lorry, was destroyed by fire, occasioned by the negligence of defts.' servants, the remaining portion being damaged by the fire. Pltf. sued defts. for the value of the goods damaged & destroyed:—Held: defts. were not liable, inasmuch as the condition that they would not be responsible for fire protected them from liability, since the clause would be of no effect unless it referred to fire caused by the negligence of defts., as, not being common carriers, they would not in any event be liable for loss caused by accidental fire.—*TURNER v. The goods, which were loaded on a motor van, were destroyed while in transit by fire, which was occasioned by the negligence of defts.' servants. Pltf. sued defts. for the value of the goods:—Held: as defts. were bailees only & not common carriers, &, therefore, not liable for an accidental fire, the condition must be construed as exempting them from liability for fire arising from their own negligence, as otherwise the condition would be of no effect.—*PAGAN v. In respect to luggage which did not fulfil these conditions the council were entitled to make such charge as they thought fit. Pltf., wishing to send a parcel of goods weighing some 50 lbs. to a customer, instructed his servant to convey it by one of defts.' trams. The servant did so, & in addition to paying his own fare paid 2d. for the parcel. When he arrived at his destination the servant claimed his parcel, but found that it had been lost. In an action brought by pltf. claiming damages:—Held: the provisions of sect. 42 of the private Act being inconsistent with one of the peculiar features of a common carrier, who was bound to carry all goods of the class which he proposed to carry, for all & sundry & irrespective of the fact that the goods were accompanied by passenger, the London County Council were not common carriers of goods so as to be entitled to the benefit of Carriers Act, 1830 (c. 68). *ROSENTHAL v. 234a. —[—]—A carrier who regularly receives goods for carriage upon terms limiting his liability may be under the obligations & subject to the liabilities of a common carrier in so far as the limitation of liability does not extend. He does not by limiting his liability assume for all purposes the position of a bailee for reward who is liable only for negligence of himself or his servants, unless the limitation of liability is so extensive as to be inconsistent with the profession or contract of a common carrier.

A consignor who tenders to carriers for carriage goods apparently harmless but in fact dangerous, whether the carriers are common carriers bound by the custom of the realm to carry goods provided they are safe & fit for carriage or whether they are a railway co. bound by statute to afford reasonable facilities for the receiving, forwarding & delivering of goods, must give warning of the danger; otherwise he impliedly warrants that the goods are safe & fit for carriage.

Forwarding agents delivered to a railway co. for carriage certain carboys containing a corrosive fluid & also certain bales of felt goods on the terms of consignment notes exempting the co. from liability in certain events & stating that they did not undertake to carry dangerous goods except on special conditions. The carboys were insufficient to contain the fluid, which escaped & injured the felt goods. The co. professed to carry the felt goods as common carriers. The owner of the felt goods claimed damages against the co., & the co. paid £137 in settlement of the claim. In an action by the co. against the forwarding agents to recover this sum as damages for breach of warranty:—Held: (1) the terms of the consignment notes did not prevent the co. from being, as they professed to be, common carriers of the felt goods; (2) the co. were therefore liable as insurers, & without proof of negligence, to the owner of the felt goods; (3) they were entitled to recover from the forwarding agents, as upon an implied warranty that the carboys were fit to be carried, the amount they had paid to the owner of the felt goods for the damage done to his goods. p 1 — — — — —] The form of contract or shipping order used by a ry. co. in connection with the transportation of live stock provided that an attendant should accompany the shipment but should not have the right to travel free or at a rate less than the ordinary fare unless he had signed the special form of contract printed on the back of the shipping bill which contained limitations as to claims for personal injuries sustained while traveling In an action to recover damages for injuries during transportation, due to the negligence of the ry. co. servant. Held the fact that the attendant had not paid any fare was due to the fact that the ry. co.'s agent made no attempt to collect the fare, & the ry. co. was responsible for the omission, the attendant was a full fare passenger & not a trespasser & was entitled to recover damages. — *STEWART v GRAND TRUNK RY. - 685b. — Injury on journey by special train.—Pltf. was engaged as a workman by contractors to the Ministry of Health for the construction of a road near H., & the Ministry made with deft. railway co. arrangements for a special train to take pltf. & other men from C. to H., a distance of twenty-six miles. Pltf. received from his employers a voucher which was addressed to the booking clerk & which contained these words: "On surrender of this voucher please supply the bearer with a return workman's ticket to H. by any ordinary workman's train without payment. This voucher is only available by workman's train." The voucher, on presentation at the booking office, was exchanged for a ticket. One side of the ticket had on it (inter alia) the words: "Seeback. Workmen. By special cheap train for the 'working classes.'" On the other side were (inter alia) the words: "This ticket is issued subject to the bye-laws, rules & regulations of the Managing Committee," & "This ticket is issued subject to the conditions mentioned in the Managing Committee's Act (62 & 63 Vict. c. clxviii), & its use by the holder is to be taken as evidence of a special contract upon those conditions. The liability of the co. is limited to a sum not exceeding £100." The above-mentioned Act contained provisions as to the running of workmen's trains on the particular railway within twenty miles of London, & limited the co.'s liability to £100, subject to certain conditions. Pltf. was injured by a collision between his train & another train. In an action for damages defts. admitted negligence, but contended that the issue of the ticket created a special contract between themselves & pltf. whereby their liability was limited to £100. The ct. found that pltf. must be taken to have been aware of the conditions indorsed on the back of the ticket. On the further question whether the terms of the contract applied to the particular journey:—Held: although the ticket & the conditions on it had been drafted as applicable to a journey by a train coming under the co.'s private Act, & contained no reference to such a journey as pltf.'s by a special train to a destination beyond twenty miles from London, yet, in the case of a passenger in the position of pltf., the conditions were a plain intimation that one condition on which the contract was made was that the co.'s liability should be limited to £100, & pltf. could recover no more than that amount.—HEARN v. SOUTHERN RY. CO. (1925), 41 T. L. R. 305, C. A.

- 685c. Time limit for making claim.—Pltf. was received by defts. under a contract to be carried in one of their steamships. The contract contained a clause that the shipowners should not be liable for loss, damage or delay to a passenger or his baggage arising from the act of God, or from causes of any kind beyond the carrier's control, even though the loss, damage or delay might have been caused by the neglect or default of the shipowners' servants. A subsequent clause provided that no claim under the contract should be enforceable against the shipowners unless a written notice thereof was delivered to them within three days after the passenger should be landed from the steamer at the termination of her voyage. In the course of the voyage one of pltf.'s hands was injured by reason of the negligence of defts.' servants, but no written notice of any claim was given by pltf. within the time limited by the contract:—Held: (1) the clause relieving defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants was valid & enforceable, but applying the ejusdem generis rule, the clause did not absolve defts. from liability for pltf.'s injury; (2) as pltf. had failed to give any written notice of his claim within the time prescribed by the contract, he was not entitled to recover.—JONES v. OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION CO., [1924] 2 K. B. 730; 93 L. J. K. B. 1053; 132 L. T. 207; 40 T. L. R. 847; 69 Sol. Jo. 106; 16 Asp. M. L. C. 432.

851a. ————]—Pltf., who was a passenger with a ticket from Paris to London via Dover, & thence by the railway of deft. railway co., took an additional ticket from the second defts., the Pullman Car Co., for a Pullman car forming part of the train between Dover & London. The Pullman car ticket stated that the Pullman Car Co. accepted no liability for passengers' luggage, & that co. did all that was reasonably necessary to bring this condition to pltf.'s notice. At Dover pltf. took a seat in the Pullman car, but an official refused to allow her to take her suit-case with her & directed a porter to put it in the luggage vestibule at the end of the car. There was no evidence in whose employment the official was, or as to the exact relationship between the two deft. cos. On the arrival of the train in London the luggage was unloaded by the Pullman car officials, but pltf.'s suit-case could not be found. In an action against both cos. :—Held : as a railway co. contracted as insurers of passengers' luggage except where the loss was caused by the passenger's own default, the railway co. were liable, but as there was no evidence that lack of care, if any, by the Pullman Car Co.'s officials in unloading had contributed to the loss, the Pullman Car Co. were not liable. EHINGER v. Part X.—Statutory Control of Carriers' Business.

- 954a. Side entrance to—Refusal to re-open.]—In deciding an application for the provision of reasonable facilities under 1851 Act, s. 2, & of reasonable facilities & conveniences under 1921 Act, s. 16 (1), the ct. must be satisfied that in refusing such facilities & conveniences the railway co. are acting without due regard to the proper discharge of their obligations, & the facility or convenience asked for will not be ordered where it is only for the benefit of a special class of persons who form a small proportion of the travelling public. Where it is sought to restore a former convenience & conditions have changed, there is nothing in the fact that it was afforded before, & the question will be decided on its merits.
- Therefore where an application was made for an order for the re-opening of a subsidiary side entrance to the station of the Midland Ry. Co. at N. which had been closed in pursuance of a general policy of "closed" stations adopted by the co., & it was shown that only 16 per cent. of the passengers using the station, who were mainly season & weekly ticket holders, would be likely to use such entrance, & that no general public inconvenience existed, the ct. refused to make any order.—NOTTINGHAM CORPN. v. A through rate was ultimately fixed at a sum of 2d. per ton in excess of the original charge, in order to allow one of the cos. to make a rebate of that amount in accordance with its practice with respect to other coal traffic. The new rate having been withdrawn, an application was made for a through rate equal to the original charge:—Held: (1) the question of rebate had been rightly excluded in fixing the amount of the through rate; (2) the Railway Comrs. had power to apportion the rate in such a way that part of it would be finally handed over to the trader.—(GLENAVON GARW COLLIERIES, LTD. v. Appcts. called no evidence. The railway co., while submitting that the onus of proof had not shifted on them under 1888 Act, s. 27 (1), called evidence & put in tables based on the Pidecock principle with the object of showing that the value of the private siding services rendered to appcts. at S. was in excess of the amounts included in their rates for station terminals at that station & also of the value of the respective private siding services rendered to appcts.' competitors at B. after allowing for the rebate:—Held: without deciding whether the onus had shifted to the railway co., but inclining to the view that it had, the Pidecock principle had been properly applied in the dissection of the respective rates, & there was no preference of appcts.' competitors.—(PRENTICE BROTHERS, LTD. v. The latter co. also owned a similar warehouse within their dock area at Manchester. A large consignment of cigarettes was conveyed over the Ship Canal to appcts.' warehouse, & was thence consigned to London over the railways of resp. cos., who charged a rate of 107s. per ton in two-ton lots, this being the ordinary Manchester town rate, whereas for similar traffic consigned from the warehouse of the Ship Canal Co. they quoted a rate of 51s. 6d., the latter being the Liverpool to London rate, which was governed by competitive shipping rates. Upon a complaint that the Manchester Ship Canal Co. were being unduly preferred the above difference in rates was sought to be justified by the railway cos. on the ground that, the ports of Manchester & Liverpool being in competition, the lower rate was necessary in order to secure for Manchester in the public interest traffic which otherwise would go to Liverpool, & that the only practical way in which to distinguish between goods consigned from Manchester Town & Manchester Port respectively was to draw a line between goods on the premises of the Ship Canal Co. & those which had passed out of the control of that co.:—Held: (1) both rates were properly charged under the circumstances, & the difference between them was justified; (2) where a railway co. quotes a rate constituting an undue preference & asserts a right & intention of charging the same the ct. has jurisdiction to interfere by injunction without waiting till such charge is actually made.—*PORT OF MANCHESTER WAREHOUSES, LTD. v. SECT. 6.—EXCEPTIONAL RATES AND FARES (Vol. VIII., p. 207).

1323a. Under 1921 Act—Meaning of "standard" & "exceptional."—The expression "standard" as applied to charges in Part III. of the above Act is the correlative or complementary term to "exceptional," & there being therefore no other alternative, every chargeable rate, fare, or charge for conveyance must necessarily be included in one or other of the above categories. Railway cos. are therefore required, under sect. 30 of the above Act, to submit to the Rates Tribunal forms of schedules for standard season tickets & workmen's fares.—Re STANDARD CHARGES SCHEDULES (1923), 17 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 117.

SECT. 7.—OWNER'S RISK RATES (Vol. VIII., p. 207).

1323b. Conveyance of goods by passenger train at owner's risk—Application for reduction of rate—Difference in risk negligible—Whether ground for two scales.—Appets. were consignors of gramophone records in the form of flat discs by passenger train. Resps. conveyed these discs at full parcels scale, but under owner's risk conditions. Appets. claimed that since the discs were conveyed at owner's risk, a reduction should be made from the full parcels scale. It was admitted that when packed by the manufacturers the risk of breakage in transit was negligible. Resps. contended that in the case of goods carried by passenger train the difference between the owner's risk rate & the co.'s risk rate was not intended as a measure of the difference of risk:—Held: the difference in the risk to the railway cos. under the two sets of conditions being negligible, on the analogy of 1921 Act, s. 46 (3), there was no ground for directing that there should be two scales, but the discs, when properly packed, should be carried at co.'s risk, & when not properly packed, at owner's risk. "Properly packed" means packed according to reasonable regulations made by the railway cos., the question of reasonableness to be settled by the Tribunal in case of difference.—BRITISH MUSIC INDUSTRIES FEDERATION v. CALEDONIAN RY. CO. (1922), 17 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 121.

1323c. — Grounds for ordering.]—Revised scales of rates based on the "zone" principle for the carriage of parcels by passenger train at co.'s risk & owner's risk respectively were put into force by resp. cos. in Nov. 1918, & were subsequently twice increased in 1920 by uniform percentage additions in accordance with directions of the Minister of Transport. In May, 1923, new & reduced scales for the above traffic were introduced, whereby the above increases of 1920 were reduced in unequal proportions in order to remove what resp. cos. considered to be anomalies between the co.'s risk & owner's risk scales, with the result that the reductions made in the charges under the owner's risk scale were considerably less than those made in the charges under the co.'s risk scale. Upon an application under 1921 Act, s. 60, to reduce the rates for parcels containing sausages, etc., consigned by passenger train at owner's risk:—Held: looking to the circumstances in which the above percentage increases had been recommended & imposed & subsequently continued by 1921 Act, s. 60, the railway cos. were not entrusted with them for any purpose connected with the adjustment of relationships between scales of charge but for the purpose of meeting increased expenses, & in the absence of special circumstances the proper practice was to give equal reduction to all; taking the above owner's risk scale of Nov. 1918, & not that of 1914, as sought by appcts., as a basis of calculation, the owner's risk rates by passenger train on appcts.' above traffic should not exceed those in force in Sept. 1920, as reduced, by 25 per cent.—SAUSAGE MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCN. v. LONDON, MIDLAND & SCOTTISH RY. CO., LONDON & NORTH EASTERN RY. CO., GREAT WESTERN RY. CO., SOUTHERN RY. CO., & CHESHIRE LINES COMMITTEE (1924), 18 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 59.

1326a. — Charges imposed by Ministry of Transport.—Appcts. claimed reductions in the charges made by resps. for the detention of ordinary wagons & sheets, which were in the case of wagons 3s. per day for the first two days after the expiration of the free periods allowed for loading & unloading & thereafter 5s. per day, & in the case of sheets 6d. & 1s. for the like periods. These charges had been imposed on & after Jan. 1, 1920, by an order of the Minister of Transport, made in accordance with a recommendation of the Rates Advisory Committee, with the object of diminishing wagon detention & causing traders to exercise more diligence in loading & unloading them. The charges in force in 1913 had been 1s. 6d. per day for wagons & 3d. per day for sheets after the free periods then given. Appcts. also claimed that in reckoning the above periods Saturday should be treated as half a day. Resps. contended that the charges complained of were reasonable, & also that it was not open to the ct. to reverse the policy of the Minister of Transport in making a differentiation between the first two days following the free periods & subsequent days:—Held: (1) the ct. had jurisdiction to modify the charges complained of; (2) having regard to the value of wagons & sheets as compared with 1913, the loss of profit to the railway cos. arising from detention, the standing & overall charges & the extra expenses of shunting & occupation of siding involved, the charges of 3s. per day for wagons & 6d. per day for sheets, while on the high side, were not unreasonable, but the additional charges of 2s. & 6d. per day upon wagons & sheets respectively after the expiration of the first two days beyond the free periods were no longer justified, & should be discontinued, & the existing arrangements with regard to Saturdays should not be interfered with.—*BRITISH HAY TRADERS' ASSOCN. v. 1331a. — Congestion caused by increased traffic—Insufficiency of unloading sidings.—Pltf. co. had on their railway system at P. a small junction station, where there was a siding with sufficient accommodation for unloading the normal goods traffic consigned to that station. Defts. were contractors who were interested in one of three local building schemes which were started about the same time, involving a large increase in the goods traffic consigned to P. Owing to the congestion brought about in P. station by this increased traffic, & the fact that the unloading siding could only accommodate a limited number of wagons at a time, a number of the wagons arriving with goods at P. on defts.' account had to be put into storage sidings, to await their turn to be taken into the proper siding to be unloaded. Great delay in the discharge of wagons was caused thereby, but all the delay occurred at the storage sidings before the wagons were put into the unloading siding. Pltf. co. claimed from defts. exceptional charges for the detention of wagons in the storage sidings, under an implied contract or for accommodation or services provided or rendered by pltf. to defts. within the scope of pltf.' undertaking by the desire of defts.:—Held: as, on the facts of the case, the wagons were not put into the storage sidings at the desire of defts. they were not liable to pay the exceptional charges claimed.—(*GREAT WESTERN RY. (2) The ct. will not infer that station terminals are being paid simply because a siding rate

SECT. 12.—REDUCTION OF RATES (Vol. VIII., p. 217).

1377a. Who may apply for—Trader “interested” —Warehouseman & forwarding agent.]—Appets., who were warehousemen & forwarding agents at Trafford Park, Manchester, & who had unsuccessfully applied to the Railway Comrs. in respect of an alleged undue preference founded on the same facts, applied for a reduction in a rate of 106s. 7d., formerly 107s., charged upon cigarettes consigned in two-ton lots from their Trafford Park warehouse, which was near to, but outside, the Manchester Docks, to King’s Cross, London, upon the ground that the corresponding rate from Liverpool was 54s. 6d., provisionally reduced to 50s. The lower rate was also charged on similar traffic consigned from Manchester Docks, while the higher rate was the ordinary Manchester town rate. Appets. contended that where traffic as to which the conditions were in all respects alike is sent from two places A. & B. in the same district to the same destination, the same railway co. shall not charge a higher sum from A. than from B., unless the distance of the destination in the case of A. is greater than the distance in the case of B., provided that the rate in the case of A. is a productive rate. They admitted that conditions could not be treated as in all respects alike, if in the one case there was competition which did not exist in the other. Resps. objected that appets. were not interested traders within 1921 Act, s. 60, & that the rate complained of, which was the ordinary Manchester town rate, was reasonable:—Held: (1) while something in the nature of a direct interest must be shown, the interest of appets. in the above charges was sufficiently direct to entitle them to prosecute these proceedings; (2) in deciding what was a reasonable rate to be charged to appets., regard should be had to the following considerations: (a) that it was not enough for a trader to show that without a reduction in rate he could not carry on a particular branch of his business; (b) that when railway cos. declared that in their own interests they could not grant facilities or reductions in rates, it would not be right for that ct. to compel them to adopt such a course of business unless appets. showed that the railway cos. were mistaken; (c) that it was not intended by 1921 Act to establish the principle of equal mileage rates for all places & the consequent adoption of exceptional rates based on competition by water or road as the standard for all rates whether such competition existed in other places or not, & therefore that the existence of a low exceptional rate, not being in fact an undue preference, while a fact to be considered, was not alone a sufficient ground for ordering the reduction of a rate for goods in competition with those having the benefit of the low rate; (3) applying the above principles & taking all the circumstances into account, appets. should be allowed a rate of 72s. 6d. subject to any general revision of rates.—PORT OF MANCHESTER WAREHOUSES, LTD. v. CHESHIRE LINES COMMITTEE, GREAT CENTRAL RY. CO., & GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1922), 17 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 95.

1377b. Grounds for ordering—Necessity for prima facie case.]—Confectionery in bottles & jars was carried by the railway cos. originally at co.’s risk, & subsequently under certain agreed packing conditions. In 1920 the cos., without making any reduction in rates, refused to carry confectionery packed as above except at owner’s risk, owing to the heavy proportion of claims against them for damage. They continued to carry confectionery not contained in bottles & jars at co.’s risk. Upon an application for a reduction in the rates for confectionery when contained in bottles & jars:—Held: (1) an appet. for a reduction in rates must make a prima facie case for the same; (2) such a case had been made upon the above facts; (3) the cos. were not precluded from making special conditions by reason of the fact that they for some time had carried the above goods without conditions; (4) while certain losses in respect of confectionery not contained in bottles & carried at co.’s risk were borne by the cos., which losses did not arise in the case of confectionery in bottles carried at owner’s risk, the saving to the cos., e.g. 1 or 5 per cent., was not sufficient to justify a reduction in rate.—MANUFACTURING CONFECTIONERS’ ALLIANCE, INCORPORATED v. The ordinary class rate was 88s. 2d., less 12½ per cent. Similar traffic was being carried to the same destination from places forty or fifty miles away at approximately the same rate as that offered:—Held: the rate should be 45s. Qu.: whether the Tribunal ought to take into account the possibility that an experimental rate will result in bringing a large future traffic.—MARSH v. which had been imposed by the Minister of Transport in exercise of his powers under Ministry of Transport Act, 1919 (c. 50), s. 3 (1) (c):—Held: (1) the ct. would not assume that the Minister was wrong in imposing such flat-rate additions; (2) it was not competent to the ct. to remove such flat-rate additions on the ground that the reasons given in support of their imposition by the former Rates Advisory Committee were not applicable to appets.' traffic; (3) the rates on appets.' traffic were not excessive, notwithstanding that the percentage increase resulting from such flat-rate additions was greater on traffic carried at low mileage rates than on that carried at higher mileage rates, & that larger reductions in rates had been given to blast furnace than to appets.', i.e., coal, traffic.

7f. — Reductions granted to other interests.]

—[—]—Upon an application for the removal of a flat-rate increase of 2d. per ton, being part of a larger increase which originally had been imposed on appets.' traffic in coal, coke & patent fuel in accordance with a second general revision of rates directed by the Minister of Transport which had since been voluntarily reduced by resps., the following grounds were relied upon by appets. in support of their case: (1) that a greater proportionate reduction in rates had been given to the traffic of certain admittedly necessitous industries than to their traffic; (2) that their traffic, & in particular their short distance traffic, had increased in density since the above increase in rates, thereby producing an exceptional profit for resps.; & (3) that they apprehended in the future an intensive foreign competition which a reduction in railway rates would assist them to meet:—Held: (1) the reductions in rates granted by resps. to the traffic of other industries were justified & did not establish a case of hardship or injustice to appets.; (2) while it was doubtful as to how far the increase in coal traffic had resulted in increased profit to resp. cos., the period of prosperity in appets.' trade which was mainly due to the abnormal European political situation was passing away; (3) in an application for a reduction of a rate under 1921 Act, s. 60, the onus lay upon an appct. to show the existence of some element of unfairness or of hardship amounting to unfairness, & appets. had not discharged that onus by alleging that a reduction in rates would assist.

Appets., the owners of a warehouse at Trafford Park, Manchester, claimed that a rate of 10s. 11d. per ton for sugar from Liverpool to their private siding at Trafford being the same amount as the corresponding rate from Liverpool to resp. co's Oldham Road station at Manchester, should be reduced by an amount equal to the cost incurred by resps. in providing terminal accommodation & services, including twenty-eight days' free warehousing, at their Manchester station. No sugar had been consigned by rail to appets.' warehouse, nor was there any evidence that any trader desired to consign sugar to it. Prior to the war resps. had given fourteen days' free storage at Manchester for sugar in view of similar free accommodation provided by competing water-carriers from Liverpool to Manchester. This facility having been withdrawn by resps., they had lost as a result a large part of their sugar traffic from Liverpool to Manchester, & therefore, as from Nov. 1923, had restored the above free storage for an extended period of twenty-eight days:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to abolish the facility of free storage, there was no evidence that the 10s. 11d. rate to Trafford Park was unreasonable or excessive, & there was no presumption that the rate when compared with the corresponding rate to Oldham Road station was unreasonable, because the latter included free storage at that station.—PORT OF MANCHESTER WAREHOUSES, LTD. v. - 34a. Distributing coal & making loans to poor & deserving inhabitants.—Testator, a native of F., a small village, bequeathed his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to set aside £500 as a "Coal Fund," the income whereof was to be used for the purchase of coal to be distributed among such poor & deserving inhabitants of F. as a committee should think fit, & to hold the rest of his residuary estate as a "Loans Fund" & to apply the capital & income thereof, under the direction of the committee, "in making loans to poor & deserving inhabitants of the parish of F. in manner hereinafter provided." No loan was to exceed £100, repayable within nine years at longest. No interest was to be charged & no borrower to have more than one loan. Only one-sixth part of the fund was to be lent in any one year, & the borrowers were to be inhabitants or residents of F. not above the age of thirty-five years. Testator directed that "all surplus money forming part of or arising from the 'Loans Fund' over & above £500 & not required for loans shall be invested by the trustees under the direction of the committee, but all investments purchased shall be from time to time sold for the purpose of advancing the produce thereof in loans if & when required":—Held: (1) the will displayed a general charitable intention & contained an immediate & effective gift of the whole of the residue to charity, displacing the claim of the next of kin; (2) the question of accumulation beyond the period allowed by law did not arise, the possibility of a surplus hereafter not impairing the validity of the immediate gift to charity; (3) the doctrine of cy-pris could be at once applied, if necessary, to any surplus income after the period allowed by law for accumulation had expired.—*Re MONK, GIFFEN v. assist or provide for persons of moderate means such as clerks, governesses & others who may not be able or eligible to benefit under the National Health Insurance Act, Old Age Pensions, or other Act of a like character to have either surgical operations performed together with medical treatment or medical treatment alone on payment of some moderate contribution; (b) the Royal National Lifeboat Institution; (c) the Lister Institute of Preventive Medicine; (d) & such other funds, charities & institutions as my exors. in their absolute discretion shall think fit; & I direct that such residue shall be divided amongst the legatees named in the paragraphs (a), (b), (c), & (d) lastly hereinbefore contained in such shares & proportions as my trustees shall determine." It was admitted that the objects under (b) & (c) were charitable. On the question whether the residue was validly disposed of by the will or failed in whole or in part for uncertainty:—Held: (1) the objects included under paragraph (a) were charitable since the means of the recipients would necessitate their being unable without the bounty of testator to procure the treatment of which they might stand in need; (2) the objects specified under heading (d) being for such indefinite charitable & non-charitable objects as the exors. should think fit were not exclusively charitable, & therefore though a trust for charitable & non-charitable indefinite purposes indiscriminately failed by reason of uncertainty, this trust being of a part of a fund for charitable purposes & another part for non-charitable indefinite purposes the ct. could ascertain what the parts were.—*Re CLARKE, BRACEY v. (2) At the time when a donation of £70,000 was made to the charity, part of which was applied by the charity in the purchase of a site for the theatre, no annual subscription had been received, but within only nine days of that time the first annual subscription was received. On the subsequent sale of the site, the question arose whether, in those circumstances, the consent of the Charity Comrs. was required to the sale by the charity:—Held: notwithstanding that in the inception of its formation it was contemplated that the charity should be supported by annual subscriptions as well as by income from endowment, & notwithstanding that there was an interval of nine days only between the donation & the first of the annual subscriptions, the charity was not at the time when the donation was received a mixed charity within 1853 Act, s. 62; & as it was, therefore, not exempted from the jurisdiction of the Charity Comrs., their consent to the sale by the charity was required.—*Re SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL TRUST, LYTTON (EARL) v. 75a. ——Testator by his will, wherein he described himself as a Clerk in Holy Orders, gave all his property to the Public Trustee upon trust for investment. He then directed that the income should be paid to the Bishops of the dioceses of St. D. & B., the rector of L. & the vicars of two other parishes & their successors, together with a layman appointed by the conference of each of those dioceses, whom he nominated administrative trustees. After stating that his wife left her interest in certain property to him to be used as he wished, but for preference for Church purposes, testator, in expressed accordance with her wish, by clause 3, devised all he should die possessed of as a fund for assisting the education of candidates for Holy Orders in the Church of England, to be administered by the trustees. Clause 12 contained the following proviso: “If for any sufficient reason, whether disendowment may or may not have taken place, the trustees decide that the interests of the Church could be better served by any changes in the method of administering, or even in the object to which the fund is applied under my will, such change or changes may be made with the several consents expressed by a majority of the Diocesan Conferences of B. & St. D.”:—Held: the objects to which the trustees were, by clause 12, empowered to change the application of the fund were not other than charitable objects & were religious objects in the interests of the Church as an organisation existing for the instruction & edification of the public, & the gift in clause 3 was a valid charitable gift.—*Re WILLIAMS, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. Later in the will he directed the

At the date of the will, & of testator's death, there was established under statutes of the Commonwealth of Australia a repatriation fund for Australian soldiers generally, but there was no repatriation fund, or similar fund, for New South Wales soldiers:—Held: (2) the gift created a valid charitable trust; (3) the trustees of the Commonwealth statutory repatriation fund were not trustees of the charity, & the settlement of a scheme had been rightly directed.—*VERGE v. In May, 1888, the Diocese of Wakefield was newly formed, & H. was enthroned on June 25, 1888, as first bishop of that diocese. The income of the fund so deposited was not drawn upon, & the fund with £900 accumulated interest was found intact by the exors. of the archdeacon, who was the survivor of the three persons in whose names the money had been deposited. The fund was not contributed to by those in whose names it was deposited :—Held : in such circumstances the exors. of the archdeacon who was the survivor were not beneficially entitled to the fund, but the fund was one subject to charitable trusts.—*PEASE v. hospital wards, beds, or cots, or other like or similar objects, as his trustees should in their absolute discretion think fit, in memory of his late wife, "for, at, or in connection with, any hospital or convalescent home or other charitable or benevolent institution"; testator expressed the wish, but not so as to impose any legal obligation on his trustees, that such hospital or other charitable or benevolent institution should be in, or connected with, the parish of St. Marylebone, London, or at, or in connection with, the town of Kilmarnock:—Held: the word "hospital" where it was first used in the will was used in an adjectival sense, & applied to the following words "wards, beds, or cots"; the primary intention of testator was to provide or endow the same, & the places where they could be provided or endowed must be hospitals or convalescent homes or other charitable institutions, & the words "benevolent institution" must be construed as ejusdem generis, with "hospital"; & therefore the bequest constituted a good & valid charitable gift.—*Re LUDLOW, BENCE-JONES v. An action was commenced for the administration of her estate, & on the further consideration thereof on Nov. 3, 1891, it appeared that amongst other conditions, which mainly related to the conduct of the services, it was made an "abiding condition" that the black gown should be worn in the pulpit, unless there should be an alteration in the law rendering it illegal. It further appeared that in compliance with the conditions a church had been erected at B. & the other conditions laid down by testatrix fulfilled, except the condition as to wearing a black gown, which condition was held by the judge to be a continuing condition, but not an illegal one; & accordingly, the fund was carried over to the credit of the action, the separate account of "the £1,500 endowment fund for the proposed B. church," with liberty for the incumbent & all persons interested to apply as to the capital or income thereof. This petition was presented by the present incumbent asking that under a scheme or otherwise the fund in ct. might be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Comrs. Evidence was adduced that the use of the black gown in the pulpit was practically unknown in the diocese of the new church, & that its use was calculated to alienate the congregation & to defeat the main objects of testatrix, namely, the teaching & practice of evangelical doctrine & services:—Held: the condition requiring the wearing of a black gown in the pulpit was subsidiary to the main charitable object, namely, the endowment of an evangelical church at B., & as the performance thereof had been shown to be impracticable the condition might be dispensed with & the fund be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Comrs. as part of the endowment of the church so erected as aforesaid.—*Re ROBINSON, WRIGHT v. The legacy of £3,000 was inadequate to provide two lifeboats:—Held: on the death of the wife the £3,000 legacy failed & fell into residue, & the institution was entitled to take the whole of the residue, after payment of the legacies to hospitals, & to apply it to its general purposes.—*Re BECK, CROOK v. 1424a. — Alternative non-charitable gift.—Testatrix by her will appointed an exor., & after giving various pecuniary legacies, including two for charitable purposes, & £100 to her exor., she left in blank the name of her residuary legatee. By a codicil testatrix desired that her residue should be "applied for charitable purposes as I may in writing direct, or to be retained by my exor. for such objects & such purposes as he may in his discretion select, & to be at his own disposal." She left no written directions as to the charities to be benefited:—Held: (1) no good charitable trust was declared, the exor. having a discretion to devote the residue to objects & purposes other than charitable; (2) the trust for those objects & purposes was too indefinite for the ct. to execute, & there being no direct gift to the exor., the added words "to be at his own disposal" were not sufficient to enable the

ct. to hold that the exor. took the residue beneficially, & he held it as trustee for the next of kin.—Re CHAPMAN, HALES v. A.-G., [1922] 2 Ch. 479; 91 L. J. Ch. 527; 127 L. T. 616; 66 Sol. Jo. 522, C. A.

Testator constituted one of his exors. residuary legatee & died in 1880. The University accepted the bequest on the terms & for the purpose specified, & published the dictionary in 1892. After all payments had been made in connection with the publication there remained over a surplus of £1,151 14s. 10d. Consols & £230 derived from income & sales of the dictionary. 2137. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph:—

Not exempt—Gift of land to mixed charity at date of determination of question by commissioner—Not mixed charity at time of donation.—In order that a donation or bequest may come within the provision in 1853 Act, s. 62, exempting from the jurisdiction or control of the Charity Comrs. a donation or bequest made to a "mixed charity"—i.e. a charity maintained partly by voluntary subscriptions & partly by income from endowment—it must be a donation or bequest to a charity which is already, at the date of gift, a mixed charity. It is not sufficient to bring the donation or bequest within the exemption for the charity to become a mixed charity between the date of gift & the determination by the ct. of the question of exemption.

Land within the registered area was conveyed to a charity which at the time, although possessed of other income-bearing land, was not also maintained by any voluntary subscriptions. After the application for registration & pending the determination of the question of exemption by the ct., voluntary subscriptions were received & the charity became a mixed charity:—Held: the land not having been given to a charity which at the date of gift was a mixed charity, was not exempt from the jurisdiction or control of the Charity Comrs., & a restriction must be entered on the register against a disposition

- 272a. ————,]—An assocn. with four branches was formed to obtain subscriptions from the members of each branch & to lend to members out of the fund so formed money on interest. Each fund, with its accretions of interest, was divided up periodically among the members ratably at a period of the year which differed in each branch. The assocn. & its branches all consisted of more than twenty members. The assocn. was not registered under any Act. Disputes having arisen, a resolution was passed by the members for the dissolution of the assocn., & an action was brought by three members suing on behalf of all members other than defts. against defts., who were the treasurer & secretary of the assocn., claiming administration of the assets of the assocn., an account of the subscriptions received by defts. from members & of their application thereof, payment of the amount found due & other relief. The action was resisted on the ground that the assocn. was illegal & that no relief could therefore be given: Held: (1) the assocn. was rendered illegal by 1908 Act, s. 1 (2), as being an unregistered assocn. of more than twenty persons carrying on a business having for its object the acquisition of gain; (2) the ct. was not debarred from affording relief to the members asking for the return of money paid into the hands of agents for application for an illegal purpose by granting an account.—GREENBERG v. Profit sharing deposit notes redeemable in four years—Company bound to redeem.]—Pltf., in reliance upon a prospectus issued in Sept., 1920, by deft. co., hereinafter called "the Trust," applied for & had allotted to him subject to the terms of the prospectus four £100 7½ per cent. profit sharing deposit notes of the Trust. It was stated in the prospectus that the notes would be paid off at 105 per cent. by four annual drawings, & under the heading "Earlier payments," that the Trust retained the right to pay off at 105 per cent. all or any of the outstanding notes at any time on giving three months' previous notice in writing, but that in the event of the sale of the Trust's R. B. estates, further referred to in that prospectus, which according to the construction placed upon the prospectus by the ct. was not confined to a sale under a certain option of purchase referred to later in the prospectus, but included a sale to anybody whomsoever, the Trust would set aside out of the proceeds of sale a sum sufficient to redeem all the notes then outstanding, & the holders would be given an option of being then paid off in cash at 105 per cent. or of retaining their notes till the date of drawing. Each of the notes, which was in the form of the specimen note referred to in the prospectus, provided that the Trust would, as & when the principal sum of £100 became payable in accordance with the conditions indorsed thereon, pay to pltf. the sum of £105, & was expressed to be subject to & with the benefit of those conditions, which repeated the provisions contained in the prospectus for the redemption of the notes by drawings & the option retained by the Trust to pay off the notes on notice, but did not refer to the promise by the Trust contained in the prospectus as to earlier payments in the event of the sale of the Trust's R. B. estates. The option to purchase referred to in the prospectus having lapsed & the Trust having contracted to sell the R. B. estates without having given notice to pltf. that his option to be paid off or to retain his notes had thereby become exercisable, & the Trust having repudiated their liability to perform their promise contained in the prospectus, pltf. brought an action to have the said liability of the Trust established & for an injunction to restrain them from dealing with the proceeds of sale without in the first place setting aside a sum sufficient to pay off the outstanding notes:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the relief claimed on either of two grounds, namely, (1) that the entire contract was contained in two written instruments, namely, the deposit notes & the prospectus, the terms of which the ct. could reconcile by construing the promise in the prospectus as if it were inserted in the note as a proviso to come into operation, if & when the R. B. estates were sold, or (2) that the promise was a binding collateral contract, the consideration for which was the contract by pltf. to take up the notes, & that, as the terms of that promise & an animus contrahendi on the part of pltf. & the Trust had been clearly proved, the test laid down by LORD Moulton in *Heilbut, Symons & Co. v. shares were allotted to deft. at a meeting at which E. was in the chair, but no notice of the allotment was sent to deft. Deft. went to China & pltf. co. alleged that he returned to England without obtaining any information. Deft., on the other hand, alleged that E.'s representations were false & that the mining rights were valueless. In an action in which pltf. co. in liquidation claimed (inter alia) £1,750 for unpaid calls on the shares, the trial judge held that as deft. intended only to take an option on the shares & had never contracted to take them the action failed:—Held: although E. was an agent of pltf. co. to come to an agreement with deft., yet by reason of E.'s fraudulent use of the application form signed by deft. the latter could not be treated as having agreed to take the shares, & the decision of the trial judge must be affirmed.—HUMPHREY & DENMAN, LTD. 1654a. What amounts to. In Jan. 1920, K. applied, on a form supplied to him by Y., for 100 shares in a co. about to be formed. On Apr. 11, Y. purported to transfer to K. 100 shares, but the transfer did not specify the denoting numbers of the shares comprised therein. At a meeting of the directors held on Apr. 16, a resolution was passed purporting to allot all the shares of the co. At that date the co. had not issued a prospectus or filed a statement in lieu thereof. On Apr. 20, the statement in lieu of prospectus was filed. At a meeting of the directors held on Apr. 30, the transfer from Y. to K. came before the board, & a resolution was passed approving the transfer & directing that a share certificate should be forwarded to K. Subsequently K. was registered a member of the co. The certificate, dated May 26, was sent to, & was accepted by, K. On June 8 a bonus, declared at the meeting of Apr. 30, was paid to, & was accepted by, K. K., as purporting to be the owner of the shares, attended a meeting of shareholders on Mar. 24, 1921. Subsequently the co. went into liquidation, & K., on whose shares there was a liability of 10s. per share, then denied being a shareholder, contending that the allotment of shares to Y. was void under 1908 Act, s. 82:—Held: (1) although the allotment to Y. was void, K. was a member of the co. at the commencement of the winding up, there having been no agreement between him & the co. until Apr. 30, when the co. was legally in a position to allot shares; (2) in any event, in view of his subsequent conduct, he was estopped from denying that he was a member of the co. Re BURTON (JAMES) & SONS, LTD., [1927] 2 Ch. 132; 96 L. "the directors may decline to register any transfer of a share made by a shareholder who is indebted to the bank"; (57.) "the directors may deduct from the dividends payable to any shareholder all sums of money due by him to the bank on account of calls or otherwise." In Nov. 1924, the registered holder of two shares assigned them in writing to resp. as security for money due; he executed no transfer but deposited the share certificate with resp. In May 1925, the bank, which had no notice of the assignment, obtained judgment against the shareholder for money due from him, & seized the shares in execution. There was no evidence that the 2879a. — [—] (1) A private co. was governed partly by special arts. & partly by Table A. Table A, art. 70, fixed the qualification of a director as "the holding of at least one share." Special art. 20 empowered the directors to appoint any other "qualified person" either to fill a casual vacancy or as an addition to the board. At a full board meeting on Saturday, Nov. 14, transfers of shares to two outsiders were duly passed for registration, after which the transferees were forthwith elected directors. The transfers were registered on the following Monday:—Held: though before their appointment the transferees had acquired an absolute right to registration, they were not "qualified persons" before actual registration, & their appointment as directors was invalid.

(2) A director was due to retire by rotation at the annual general meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 11, & part of the business of which notice was given was the election of a director in his place. The retiring director's re-election was moved at the meeting, but the matter, though discussed, was not finally dealt with, & the meeting was adjourned successively to Thursday, Nov. 12, Saturday, Nov. 14, & Tuesday, Nov. 17. At the last adjournment the original motion for the retiring director's re-election was put & lost, & another shareholder was proposed & elected in his place:—Held: as the adjourned meeting was merely a continuation of the original meeting at which the question of the retiring director's re-election or replacement was considered, the proceedings were in order, & Table A, art. 82, had no application. (3) Semble: Table A, art. 82, only applies to a case where the retirement of a director by rotation & the necessity for 3059a. - - - - - (1) The manner in which the work of a co. is to be distributed between the board of directors & the staff is a business matter to be decided on business lines. The larger the business carried on by the co. the more numerous & the more important the matters that must of necessity be left to the managers, the accountants, & the rest of the staff.

(2) In ascertaining the duties of a director of a co., it is necessary to consider the nature of the co.'s business & the manner in which the work of the co. is, reasonably in the circumstances & consistently with the arts. of assocn., distributed between the directors & the other officials of the co.

(3) In discharging those duties, a director (a) must act honestly, & (b) must exercise such degree of skill & diligence as would amount to the reasonable care which an ordinary man might be expected to take, in the circumstances, on his own behalf. But, (c) he need not exhibit in the performance of his duties a greater degree of skill than may reasonably be expected from a person of his knowledge & experience ; in other words, he is not liable for mere errors of judgment ; (d) he is not bound to give continuous attention to the affairs of his co. ; his duties are of an intermittent nature to be performed at periodical board meetings, & at meetings of any committee to which he is appointed, & though not bound to attend all such meetings he ought to attend them when reasonably able to do so ; & (e) in respect of all duties which, having regard to the exigencies of business & the arts. of assocn., may properly be left to some other official, he is, in the absence of grounds for suspicion, justified in trusting that official to perform such duties honestly.

(4) A director who signs a cheque that appears to be drawn for a legitimate purpose is not responsible for seeing that the money is in fact required for that purpose, or that it is subsequently applied for that purpose, assuming, of course, that the cheque comes before him for signature in the regular way, having regard to the usual practice of the co. A director must of necessity trust to the officials of the co. to perform properly & honestly the duties allocated to them.

Before any director signs a cheque, or parts with a cheque signed by him, he should satisfy himself that a resolution has been passed by the board, or committee of the board, as the case may be, authorising the signature of the cheque ; & where a cheque has to be signed between meetings, he should obtain the confirmation of the board subsequently to his signature.

The authority given by the board or committee should not be for the signing of numerous cheques to an aggregate amount, but a proper list of the individual cheques, mentioning the payee & the amount of each, should be read out at the board or committee meeting & subsequently transcribed into the minutes of the meeting.

(5) It is the duty of each director to see that the co.'s moneys are from time to time in a proper state of investment, except so far as the arts. of assocn. may justify him in delegating that duty to others.

(6) Before presenting their annual report & balance sheet to their shareholders, & before recommending a dividend, directors should have a complete & detailed list of the co.'s assets & investments prepared for their own use & information, & ought not to be satisfied as to the value of their co.'s assets merely by the assurance of their chairman, however apparently distinguished & honourable, nor with the expression of the belief of their auditors, however competent & trustworthy.

(7) It is not the duty of a director of a big insurance co. to supervise personally the safe custody of the securities of the co. It would be impracticable, on every purchase of securities, for actual delivery thereof to be made to the directors, or, on every sale, for the delivery to the brokers of the securities sold to await a meeting of the board or of a committee of directors. The duty of seeing that the securities are in safe custody must of necessity be left to some official of the co. in daily attendance at the office of the co., such as the manager, accountant, or secretary.

(8) A co.'s stockbrokers, however respectable & responsible they may be, are not proper persons to have the custody of its securities except on such occasions when, for short periods, securities must of necessity be left with them; but immediately such necessity ceases the securities should be lodged in the co.'s strong room or with its bank, or placed in other proper & usual safe keeping.

(9) A director is not responsible for declaring a dividend unwisely. He is liable if he pays it out of capital, but the onus of proving that he has done so lies upon the liquidator who alleges it.

Art. 150 of the co.'s arts. of assocn. provided (inter alia) that none of the directors, auditors, secretary or other officers for the time being of the co. should be answerable for any loss, misfortune, or damage which might happen in the execution of their respective offices or trusts, or in relation thereto, unless the same should happen by or through their own wilful neglect or default respectively:—Held: (10) an act, or an omission to do an act, is wilful where the person who acts, or omits to act, knows what he is doing & intends to do what he is doing, but if that act or omission amounts to a breach of that person's duty, & therefore to negligence, he is not guilty of wilful neglect or default unless he knows that he is committing, & intends to commit, a breach of his duty, or is recklessly careless in the sense of not caring whether his act or omission is or is not a breach of his duty; (11) the immunity afforded by art. 150 was one of the terms upon which the directors held office in the co., & availed them as much on a misfeasance summons by the Official Receiver under 1908 Act, s. 215, as it would have done in an action by the co. against them for negligence; (12) upon the evidence & in accordance with the principles enunciated above, none of the resp. directors, other than the managing director, was liable.

(13) The measure of the auditor's responsibility depends upon the terms of his engagement. There may be a special contract defining the duties & liabilities of the auditors. If there is, then that contract governs the question. The arts. will, however, be looked at if there is no special agreement, because the auditors will presumably have taken their duties upon the terms, among others, set out in the arts. That is not to say that auditors can set aside a statutory obligation. No agreement or art. of assocn. can remove an imperative or to them, so that there is abundant scope for discretion. Art. 150 is not in conflict with the sect. The onus lies upon the auditors, who would not be excused for total omission to comply with any of the requirements of the sect., or for any consequences of deliberate or reckless indifferent failure to ask for information on matters which call for further explanation.

(15) An auditor is not justified in omitting to make personal inspection of securities that are in the custody of a person or co. with whom it is not proper that they should be left, whenever such personal inspection is practicable.

(16) When an auditor discovers that securities of the co. are not in proper custody, it is his duty to require that the matter be put right at once, or, if his requirement is not complied with, to report the fact to the shareholders, & this whether he can or cannot make a personal inspection.

Auditors should not be content with a certificate that securities are in the possession of a particular co., firm, or person unless the co., etc., is trustworthy, or, as it is sometimes put, respectable, & further is one that in the ordinary course of business keeps securities for its customers. In all these cases the auditor must use his judgment.

Where the auditors did not personally inspect the securities of the co. in the hands of the stockbrokers of the co., & accepted from time to time the certificate of the brokers that they held large blocks of such securities, & did not either insist upon those securities being put in proper custody or report the matter to the shareholders:—Held: (17) they committed a breach of duty, but, inasmuch as throughout the audit the auditors honestly & carefully discharged what they conceived to be the whole of their duty to the co., such negligence was not wilful, & art. 150 applied to exonerate them from liability.

Where the auditors after a full investigation in which they were misled & deceived, & their reports to the board suppressed, by the chairman of the co., (a) described large sums of money left in the hands of the co.'s stockbrokers & lent to the general manager of the co. as "Loans at call or short notice," "Loans" or "Cash at hand & in bank"; (b) failed to discover that the co.'s stockbrokers, in order to reduce their indebtedness to the co. for the purposes of the audit, made purchases, on behalf of the co., immediately before the close of the co.'s financial year, of Treasury Bills which in fact never came into the possession of the co. & were sold immediately the new financial year had opened:—Held: (18) they were not guilty of any breach of duty as auditors.

3157a. Presumption of authority.] Pltfs. were a firm of fruit brokers. Defts. & the P.

Co. were two cos. engaged in the fruit trade. M. was a director of both cos. By art. 28 of the arts. of deft. co. the directors were empowered to “delegate any of the powers for the time being vested in the directors.” The arts. also incorporated Table A. M. purported to make on behalf of defts. an agreement with pltfs. that in consideration of pltfs. advancing a sum of money to the P. Co., pltfs. should have the right to sell on commission all the fruit imported both by defts. & the P. Co., & that pltfs. should be entitled to retain the proceeds of sale of defts.’ fruit as well as of that of the P. Co. as security for the advance. M. had no authority from defts. to make such a contract. Pltfs. requiring confirmation of the agreement by deft. co., the secretary of defts. wrote a letter purporting to confirm the agreement on behalf of defts., & pltfs., treating that as a sufficient confirmation, made the advance. The secretary had no authority to give such confirmation. Defts. subsequently repudiated the agreement as made without their authority. At the time that they made the advance pltfs. had no knowledge of the terms of defts.’ arts. or that they incorporated Table A: Held: whether the agreement was to be treated as having been made by M. as an ordinary “director” of deft. co., or by the secretary as “agent,” or by the two combined, pltfs. were not entitled to assume that any authority to make it had been delegated to them by the board, because (1) although a person who contracts with an individual director or servants of a co., knowing that the board of directors has power to delegate its authority to such an individual, may in certain circumstances assume that power of delegation has been exercised & that he may safely deal with the individual in question as representing the co., he cannot rely on the supposed exercise of such power if he did not know of the existence of the power at the time that he made the contract; (2) there was something so unusual in an agreement to apply the money of one co. in payment of the debt of another that pltfs. were put upon inquiry to ascertain whether the person or persons making the contract had any authority in fact to make it; (3) even if pltfs. had known of the existence of the express power of delegation, they would not have been entitled to assume that it had 4730a. ——— Floating charge over part of assets already charged.—Where a debenture trust deed, creating a general floating charge over all the undertaking & assets of the co. both present & future, reserves power to the co. in the ordinary course of its business to create specific charges over any of those assets, then although a second general floating charge over all the property comprised in the first charge but ranking pari passu with or in priority to that charge, is, under the general law, incompatible with the first charge & ranks subject to it, yet there is no principle of law which forbids the creation of a second floating charge over part only of those assets ranking pari passu with, or in priority to, the earlier floating charge, so long as the later floating charge is within the limits of the power reserved.

A debenture trust deed created a general floating charge over all its undertaking & assets both present & future, but reserved to the co. power to create in priority to that charge such mortgages, or charges as the co. should think proper "by the deposit of any dock warrants, bills of lading, or other similar commercial documents, or upon any raw materials, or finished or partly finished products & stock for the purpose of raising money in the ordinary course of the business of the co." In pursuance of the power & in the course & for the purposes of its business, the co. raised £12,000 & secured payment thereof by charging all the before-mentioned documents, materials & stock, both present & future, by way of a floating security to rank in priority to the floating charge created by the trust deed:—Held: the power reserved to the co., except as to sub-ject-matter purpose, was unlimited; it enabled the co. to choose the form of a floating charge, if required, & the second charge was valid & entitled to priority over the first charge.—Re AUTOMATIC BOTTLE MAKERS, OSBORNE v. A scheme for reconstruction of the co. provided for the mtge. bonds being exchanged for income bonds subject to an issue of first income bonds; also that a committee, one only of whom was to be appointed by the mtge. bondholders, should have power to modify the scheme without confirmation by the bondholders. The scheme was sanctioned by the majority of the bondholders requisite under the trust deed. The required majority would not have been obtained but for the vote of the holder of a large number of bonds, whose support of the scheme was obtained by the promise of a large block of ordinary stock, an arrangement which was not mentioned in the scheme: Held: the resolution was invalid, both because the bondholder in voting had not treated the interest of the whole class of bondholders as the dominant consideration, & because the scheme, so far as it provided for a committee, was ultra vires.—BRITISH

— Due registration—Particulars of property charged insufficiently entered.]—A co. with the object of securing payment of its overdraft at pltf. bank "demised" to the bank a certain leasehold factory with all the movable "plant used in or about the premises" for a term of about 996 years. The bank sent the indenture to the registrar of companies for registration under 1098 Act, s. 93. In the particulars required to be filed pursuant to that sect. the instrument was described as a mtge. of the leasehold premises, no mention being made of the chattels. The registrar entered the description of the instrument in the register in similar terms, identifying it by its date, & omitting all mention of any charge on the chattels. Subsequently the sheriff, in execution of a judgment recovered by deft. against the co., seized certain chattels of the co. upon the mortgaged premises, including certain motor vans. The bank claimed the goods in question under their mtge., & obtained from the registrar a certificate "that a mtge. or charge dated"—specifying the date & the parties to the instrument—"was registered pursuant to Cos. Act, s. 93." On an interpleader issue to try the title of the bank as against the execution creditor:—Held: as the certificate identified the instrument of charge, & stated that the mtge. or charge thereby created had been duly registered, it must be understood as certifying the due registration of all the charges created by the instrument, including that of the chattels, & it was conclusive evidence of the due registration of the chattels none the less because the register in omitting to mention them was not merely defective but misleading.—*NATIONAL PROVINCIAL & UNION BANK OF ENGLAND v. —Under Companies Ordinance, 1901 (c. 20), s. 47.]—The words do not refer to a winding up under any particular Act in the sense of a dissolution, but mean a winding up of a co. in the sense of a realisation of the assets, a distribution of the proceeds among creditors & an adjustment of the rights of shareholders among themselves, & therefore a co. may be "being wound up" in this sense under Bkpcy. Less than three months before the commencement of its compulsory winding up in a county ct., a co. having a paid-up capital of less than £10,000 issued debentures to the extent of £1,500 in favour of two persons. The liquidator moved in the county ct. for a declaration that the debentures were invalid either as a fraudulent preference under 1908 Act, s. 210, or as a floating charge created otherwise than for cash under sect. 212, & that the persons named in the debentures had no rights in respect of the sums expressed to be secured thereby except as unsecured creditors: Held: the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to entertain the liquidator's application, & as he had done so, his discretion could not be interfered with. —*Re STANTON (F. & P.), LTD., HOGG v. 5357a. —.—A co. was registered in Barbados under Cos. Act, 1910, of Barbados, as a public co., in order to carry on testator's business & to divide the profits of it between members of his family entitled under his will to share them; the managing director had a preponderating voting power. Upon a petition for winding up by shareholders who were not directors, it appeared that the directors had omitted to hold general meetings, or to submit accounts, or recommend a dividend, & that they had laid themselves open to the suspicion that their object in so omitting was to keep petitioners in ignorance of the co.'s position & affairs & to acquire petitioners' shares at an under-value:—Held: the power to wind up the co. under sect. 127 (vi) of that Act [which was identical with 1908 Act, s. 129] was not confined to cases in which there were grounds analogous to those mentioned earlier in the sect.; & in the circumstances of the case, regard being had to the domestic character of the co., petitioners were entitled under that provision to a winding-up order.—*LOCH v. Creditors to the extent of £300,000, including one whose claim amounted to about two-thirds of the co.'s whole indebtedness, had assented to the voluntary winding up, & petitioner, who was a creditor to the extent of £5,000 only, was the sole creditor who objected to the co. being wound up voluntarily:—Held: although as a general rule the co. would have regard to the wishes of a majority of creditors, the circumstances were of such special character that an exception to the general rule should be made, & a winding-up order pronounced.—*BOURLOIS v. 6989a. A co. issued preference shares, which entitled the holders to a fixed cumulative preference dividend in priority to the ordinary shares, but not conferring any priority as regards capital. By the arts. of assocn. it was provided that subject to the rights of members entitled to shares issued upon special conditions the profits of the co. should be divisible among the members in proportion to the amount paid up on the shares held by them respectively. The co. was wound up voluntarily & the liquidator having paid all dividends & debts, & returned the whole of the paid-up capital to the shareholders, there remained surplus assets: Held: (1) as long as the co. was a going concern the preference shareholders were entitled only to the preferential dividend, but on the voluntary winding up this preference was determined, & thenceforward the preference shares retained no preference or priority over the ordinary shares; (2) according to the constitution of the co. the prima facie presumption in favour of equality of distribution amongst all the shareholders ought to obtain, & the surplus assets, including deposit interest, would be distributed amongst all the shareholders pro rata in proportion to the amount paid up on their shares. — Re MADAME TUSSAUD & SONS, LTD., [1927] 1 Ch. 657; 96 L. 7034. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph:—

— Judgment after winding up—Right of company to recover money from third party based on company's liability to judgment creditor—No ground for not staying execution. — The manager of a co. fraudulently & without authority accepted bills of exchange in the co.'s name, & upon those bills the co. was sued to judgment by the holders. After the commencement of the action the co. went into voluntary liquidation. The co. subsequently recovered judgment in an action against a third party for damages for having wrongfully facilitated the commission of the above fraud, & for having thereby rendered the co. liable on the bills. The judgment creditors in the first action then sought to attach under a garnishee order the money so payable to the co. by the third party. On an application by the co. to stay the garnishee proceedings: — Held: where a judgment is recovered against a co. which is in voluntary liquidation the invariable practice of the ct. is to stay execution of the judgment unless there are very exceptional reasons for exercising its discretion otherwise, & the fact that the only right of the co. to recover the money claimed from the garnishees was based upon the co.'s liability to the judgment creditors was not such an exceptional circumstance as to take the case out of the general rule. — *ANGLO-BALTIC & MEDITERRANEAN BANK v. —A Russian insurance co., having its principal office in Petrograd & a branch office in London, in accordance with 1908 Act, s. 274, filed with the registrar the name of C. as its authorised representative to accept service of process on its behalf. By a series of decrees passed in 1918 the Soviet Govt. purported to put all insurance cos. in Russia into liquidation & to appropriate their property. In the spring of 1923 C. sent a notice to the registrar that the co. which he represented had ceased to exist, & at his request this notice was placed upon the file. In the summer of the same year resps. brought an action against the co. by specially indorsed writ for payment of a sum of money claimed to be due to them in respect of certain insurance transactions. The writ was served upon C., who protested that he had no power to act for the co., & judgment was signed in default of appearance:—Held: (1) at the date of the writ the co. had not ceased to exist by virtue of the decrees of the Soviet Govt.; (2) the service of the writ on C. was valid; (3) the co. by putting on the file the name of a person authorised to accept service of process on its behalf agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the ct., & it must be assumed that the Russian Govt. would, according to the comity of nations, recognise the judgment as effective.—EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ASSURANCE CORPN. v. 903. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph :—

]—By the Lanchester Inclosure Act, 1773, the moors & commons of the manor of Lanchester, Durham, were divided & allotted. The Act provided that the lord of the manor & his assigns should have, hold & enjoy all mines & minerals within & under the allotments, with full & free liberty of searching for, draining, winning & working the mines & minerals by any ways or means then in use or thereafter to be invented as fully & freely as he might or could have had, held, used & enjoyed the same in case that Act had not been made without paying any damages or making any satisfaction for so doing; & also that the annual rental of a certain allotment to the justices should be applied in or towards the compensation of those allottees whose allotments were damaged by the exercise of the lord's mining rights, & that any deficiency should be made up by means of a rate levied upon all the allottees :—Held : (1) the case was governed by the decision of the Ct. of Appeal in Consett Waterworks Co. v. Rilson, No. 901, ante, which was a decision on the identical question arising on the construction of the same Act & in the same circumstances, & although the reasoning upon which that decision was founded had been disapproved of by the House of Lords in Butterknowle Colliery Co. v. Bishop Auckland Industrial Co., No. 905, post, the decision itself had not been overruled & was therefore binding upon the ct., & defts. had a right to work the mines so as to let down the surface of the land without paying damages or making any compensation to plffs.; (2) (YOUNGER, L.J.) the decision at which the Ct. of Appeal had felt itself compelled to arrive in deference to authority binding upon it might quite well have been reached on the construction of the Act itself apart altogether from the decision by which it was bound.—CONSETT INDUSTRIAL & PROVIDENT SOCIETY, LTD. v. - 62a. The Board of the Railway Comrs. for Canada made an order directing a railway co. to construct a subway so that, owing to the increased traffic the existing roadway should be lowered & pass under the railway instead of crossing it on the level, & ordering that detailed plans be filed for the approval of the chief engineer of the Board :—Held : (1) the subway was not part of the undertaking of the railway, so as to enable the co. to take possession of land under Expropriation Act, R. S. C., 1906 (c. 143), for the purpose of the railway proper, & the lowered road still remained part of the road belonging to the municipality ; (2) detailed plans must be detailed plans of what was actually lodged as the general plan, & it was not within the liberty of the co. to enlarge the scope of the original plan & provide for a new access to the subway & the taking of land. Detailed plans were only to show the precise way in which the construction was to be made.—BOLAND v. CANADIAN NATIONAL RY. CO., [1927] A. C. 198 ; 95 L. J. P. C. 209 ; 136 L. T. 197, P. C.

- 116a. Land not bona fide intended to be taken for purpose.—Appls. had statutory power to acquire compulsorily land required for the purpose of making or extending streets, also land required for "carrying out improvements in or remodelling any portion of the city." In connection with the extension of a street, they resolved to acquire resps.' land for the latter purpose. They had previously been restrained from acquiring the land for the extension, on the ground that it was not really required for that purpose, but that its purchase was desired because of its probable increase in value. No plan for improving or remodelling the area was considered or proposed, & evidence as to proceedings in the council showed that appls. were endeavouring to give a new form to the transaction previously decided upon, rather than considering whether resps.' land was required for improving or remodelling :—Held : the evidence sustained the lower ct.'s conclusion of fact that appls. were exercising their powers for a purpose differing from those specified by the statute, & they had rightly been restrained from acquiring resps.' land.—SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. They had made on the promontories a bathing house & wharf, both of which they used in connection with the school, but no legal right of way across the railway was proved. The Crown took the two promontories for a public purpose, & upon an area wholly to the east of the railway, & including the two small promontories, made a large railway shunting yard. A claim by applts. to compensation for the damage to their property on the west of the railway by reason of the construction of the shunting yard having been rejected:—Held: the possession & control of the two promontories gave an enhanced value to applts.' land on the west side of the railway, & in respect of depreciation in value of those lands due to the anticipated legal use of works which might be constructed upon the two promontories, applts. were owners whose lands had been injuriously affected, & accordingly they were entitled to compensation; further, the ct. in assessing the compensation should have regard to the anticipated use of the promontories as part of a shunting yard, not to the actual use at the time of the assessment.—*ROCKINGHAM SISTERS OF CHARITY v. 650a. — Acquisition of land & appointment of arbitrator under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55).—A land co. was the owner in fee simple of certain land through which a sewerage board, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), after duly serving on the co. notice of intention to do so, carried a sewer & a rising main. Subsequently an agreement in writing was entered into between the parties regarding what had been done. Differences having arisen regarding the compensation to be paid by the board to the co., recourse was had to arbn. The arbitrator was appointed under Public Health Act, 1875, & before entering on the arbn. made the statutory declaration under that Act. Having considered the disputes he made an alternative award in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. If the ct. was of opinion that compensation was to be assessed solely under Public Health Act, 1875, he awarded the co. £5,090; if the arbitration was under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57), & the basis on which compensation was to be awarded was to be governed by the principles in s. 2 of that Act, he awarded the co. £2,148. Held: as the land had been acquired under powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875, before the agreement between the parties was entered into, it had been acquired compulsorily, & as there was nothing in the agreement which affected the primary basis of the value of the land nor any other matter, including the appointment of the arbitrator expressly under Public Health Act, 1875, which was inconsistent with the rules laid down by s. 2 of the Act of 1919, that Act applied to the arbn., & the co. should be awarded £2,148.—THURROCK, GRAYS & TILBURY JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. 773a. Award of lump sum—Validity.—Claimant was the owner of certain land with regard to the acquisition of which an arbn. was held under Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919 (c. 57). He claimed £17,362, &, before the hearing of the arbn., the President of the Air Council made an unconditional offer of £10,000. The sum awarded to claimant by the official arbitrator in respect of his interest in the land & the consequential damage thereto was £11,415. In dealing with the costs the arbitrator directed the Council "to pay £100 towards the costs of claimant." Claimant applied to the ct. by motion for the award to be remitted to the arbitrator on the ground that he had, in making the above order as to costs, not properly exercised the discretion conferred upon him by sect. 5 (4) of the above Act:—Held: in awarding the lump sum of £100, the arbitrator had in terms awarded to claimant part of his costs of the arbn. within sect. 5, & as it seemed reasonably clear from the Act that, when a sum was awarded by the arbitrator in excess of the amount offered by the authority but less than the sum which claimant had offered to accept, the arbitrator had an absolute discretion as to the costs, the motion to review the award failed.—*BRADSHAW v. - 2225a. Under Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1919 (c. 35)—Acquisition of land—Extent of powers.—Under the above Act, depts. made an order, subsequently confirmed by the Minister of Health, for the compulsory acquisition for the purposes of a scheme under sect. 1 of the Act, of three thousand acres for the erection of working-class houses for the accommodation of one hundred & twenty thousand persons. They also proposed to acquire compulsorily a beerhouse within the area with the objects, (a) of controlling or regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquor on the site, that control to be based on management by some co. or assocn. whose servants were not to have a pecuniary interest in the sale of alcohol, & (b) of providing for the general entertainment & refreshment of the population:—Held: the Act contemplated extensive schemes for the provision of working-class houses by local authorities, involving in many cases the acquisition of considerable areas of land extending even to the creation of a new town; sect. 12 (1), treated the land within the selected area as a whole, & as something in the nature of a building estate, & as incidental to the complete control of the development of the building scheme, empowered the local authority to acquire any houses or other buildings, whether the same were or were not required for use as, or as a site for, workmen's dwellings, or for roads or other purposes mentioned in the earlier Housing Acts; & that power was not limited to houses which it was proposed to adapt for working-class accommodation under the power to alter contained in the later part of the sub-sect.; upon the above construction of the Act, subject to confirmation by the Minister of Health, depts. had power under sect. 12 (1) of the Act to acquire compulsorily the beerhouse in question for the attainment of the objects above-mentioned.

- Semble:* both under sect. 12 (2) of the Act, & under Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1903 (c. 39), s. 11, depts. had a similar power for effecting the like objects. — CONRON v. - 17a. — — — — —.]—Pltfs. were an English limited co. of engineers & merchants. Part of its business was transacted in Russia, & for the purpose of that business pltfs., through their London bankers, deposited moneys & Russian Treasury Bonds with the Petrograd branch of the Banque de Commerce de l'Azoff-Don. Having done so, pltfs. took out two policies of insurance to insure themselves against loss or damage to the insured property "directly caused by fire, rioters, civil commotions, war, civil war, revolutions, rebellions, military or usurped power. . . ." No claim was to attach under the policy (inter alia) "for confiscation or destruction by the Govt. of the country in which the property is situated." In Dec. 1917, during the currency of the policy, the Banque de Commerce was occupied by soldiers & sailors of the Red Guard, & by the Bolsheviks, purporting to act under the authority of an executive committee of the Commissaries of the People. They demanded & obtained control & possession of the bank & everything contained in it, including the insured property. Two actions were brought claiming for losses under the policies, & the question arose with regard to the recognition of the Soviet Govt. as a sovereign power:—Held: on the information then available, the act of the military in seizing the insured property was an act of confiscation by the Govt. of Russia which was in existence at the material time, & had since been recognised by His Majesty's Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia, & was not an act of a usurped authority; therefore the claim failed by reason of the clause which provided that no claim was to attach under the policy ". . . for confiscation or destruction by the Govt. of the country in which the property is situated."—WHITE, CHILD & BENEY, LTD. v. - 417a. ——— — — —.]—The Q. Co. was a co. incorporated & carrying on business in Queensland. In Sept. 1886, the Q. Co. issued & deposited with the U. Bank, as security for moneys due & to become due, two debentures, the one for £10,000, & the other for £50,000; both debentures assigned the uncalled capital of the co., & were, as the ct. held, valid according to the law of Queensland. In Dec. 1886 the Q. Co. made a call of £50 a share payable in four instalments, in Feb., Apr., June, & Aug. 1887. The co. had many shareholders domiciled in Scotland & some in England. On Oct. 20, 1887, an order was made for winding up the co. in Queensland, & on June 14, 1888, a similar order was made in England. On Feb. 24, 1887, the A. Co., a co. domiciled in Scotland, commenced proceedings in Scotland to recover from the Q. Co. large sums entrusted to them for investment. Immediately after the institution of the action the call moneys due under the call made by the Q. Co. as above, from shareholders resident in Scotland, were arrested by the Scotch process called arrestment on the dependence of the action. Proceedings in this action were restrained by the High Ct. in England on Feb. 24, 1888.

Co. which the A. Co. had acquired by their proceedings, & the amounts received from the Scotch shareholders were directed to be carried by the liquidator to a separate account. On Sept. 6, 1889, an order was made in the Queen's land winding up allowing the claim of the A. Co. for £12,662 4s. 5d. The U. Bank, whose claim against the Q. Co. had been allowed for £74,000, but who had valued their security at £31,000, took out a summons claiming that the liquidator should pay over to the bank all the moneys in his hands representing proceeds of the said call. The A. Co. claimed to be paid in priority out of the money received from Scotch shareholders. The evidence stated that, according to the law of Scotland, the arrestment had the effect of attaching the fund in favour of the creditor obtaining it, & upon the decree being pronounced in the suit the security would become complete, & that such an arrestment operated as an assignment of the fund duly intimated; that an admission of the sum due in the winding up of a co. was for this purpose equivalent to a decree; & that, according

- 639a. —]—Pltf was received by defts., a British co., under a contract made in Detroit, to be carried in one of their steamships from New York to Southampton. The contract contained a clause that the shipowners should not be liable for loss, damage or delay to a passenger or his baggage arising from the act of God, or from causes of any kind beyond the carrier's control, even though the loss, damage or delay might have been caused by the neglect or default of the shipowners' servants. It was further provided that all questions arising under the clause should be decided according to English law. A subsequent clause provided that no claim under the contract should be enforceable against the shipowners unless a written notice thereof was delivered to them within three days after the passenger should be landed from the steamer at the termination of her voyage. In the course of the voyage one of pltf.'s hands was injured by reason of the negligence of defts.' servants, but no written notice of any claim was given by pltf. within the time limited by the contract:—Held: the language of the contract showed that it was the intention of the parties that it should be wholly governed by English law; the clause relieving defts. from liability for the negligence of their servants, though void by the law in force in Detroit, was valid & enforceable, by English law, but, applying the cjusdem generis rule, the clause did not absolve defts. from liability for pltf.'s injury.

The policy moneys were expressed to be payable in London, but all premiums were payable either at the central office in New York or at the office where the insurance was payable, & proofs of death were to be furnished at the New York office. An indorsement on the policy provided that it should be construed according to English law:—Held: it was permissible & necessary to look at the terms of the contracts & to determine from them at what place the debts would be recoverable; applying that test in the present case, the debts were recoverable in London where they were expressed to be payable.—NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE Co. v. 918a. ————]—It is established by the cases of Armylage v. Armylage, No. 917, ante, & Anghinelli v. Anghinelli, No. 918, ante, that, according to the practice of the ecclesiastical cts., a suit for judicial separation, which is now substituted for the divorce a mensâ et thoro, can be entertained in a case where both parties are resident but not domiciled within the jurisdiction. But the ct. has no jurisdiction to maintain a suit against a resp. who at the time of his citation or of the institution of the suit is resident out of the jurisdiction. Statute of Citations, 1531 (c. 9), s. 2, which forbade the ecclesiastical cts. to cite any person out of the diocese where he was inhabiting or dwelling, must be taken to have limited the jurisdiction & not only the power of service of the ecclesiastical cts.; & Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (c. 85), which permits service within or without His Majesty's Dominions, cannot extend the jurisdiction.—GRAHAM v. Garnishee proceedings—Payment of debt situate in England—Recognised by international law.]—Judgment having been recovered against a foreign corpn., who submitted to the jurisdiction, a garnishee summons was issued to attach a debt due from a London bank to the foreign corpn.:—Held: the judgment creditors were entitled to have an order nisi made absolute, inasmuch as payment under a garnishee order operated as a discharge of the amount paid & was recognised by international law as having that effect, & consequently there was no real risk of the garnishees being obliged to pay the debt over again to the foreign corpn., & there was, therefore, nothing inequitable in making the order absolute.

Plffs. having obtained a garnishee order nisi to attach a debt due to defts. from third parties in England:—Held: as the debt owing from the garnishees to defts. was governed by English law, payment by the garnishees of the amount of the judgment debt would be a discharge pro tanto of the debt due from them to defts., & it must be assumed that the Soviet Govt. would follow the ordinary rules of international comity & admit the validity of that payment, & the garnishee order ought to be made absolute.—SEDGWICK COLLINS & CO. v. On Mar. 4 defts. served notice of motion to set aside the writ & all subsequent proceedings in the English action. The American action was discontinued on Mar. 8 :—Held : having obtained bail & so released the ship from any further claim in respect of the particular damage alleged, plffs.' subsequent discontinuance of the action in America after the re-arrest in England did not cure their breach of good faith in instituting proceedings in England & causing the ship to be arrested again, & the writ & all subsequent proceedings must be set aside.—THE GOLAA, [1926] P. 103; 95 L. - 1383a. — — — — —.]—On June 13, 1922, a British steamer & a Finnish steamer were in collision in the river Maas, Holland. After the collision the Finnish owners threatened arrest in a Dutch port. The owners of the British steamer who were anxious that the litigation should take place in England, reluctantly instructed their agents in Holland to provide bail, & although no proceedings were begun, documents in identical terms in the nature of bank guarantees to provide bail if proceedings were commenced within three months were exchanged on July 29 between the owners. On Sept. 6 the Finnish vessel came within the jurisdiction of the English cts., & an action was commenced, & the ship arrested & bail given under protest at the suit of the owners of the British ship. At that time no proceedings had been begun in Holland, but on Sept. 14 an action was commenced in Holland by the Finnish owners. The Finnish owners moved that the writ & all proceedings in the action by the British owners should be stayed, on the ground that their action was oppressive because it required the Finnish owners to give bail in two cts., & was inequitable as a breach of faith of the agreement in Holland :—Held : no legal proceedings having been commenced when the writ was issued in England, & there being no arrest & no bail given prior to the writ now sought to be set aside, there was nothing to debar the British owners from carrying on proceedings in England.—THE JUNO (1922), 128 L. 1. — In proceedings under Patents & Designs Acts.—Appets. applied by originating summons under Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 29, as amended by Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), s. 8, for an inquiry as to the remuneration proper to be paid to them for the user by a Govt. department of the patented invention of which they were the registered owners. In the course of the proceedings, preliminary to hearing of the motion, orders were made in which the litigation was treated, with the acquiescence of both litigants, as subject to the ordinary rule as to costs, & on two occasions orders were made requiring appets. to give security for costs. After the hearing had proceeded for some time appets. withdrew their claim in view of a prior trial of the invention found to have been made on behalf of the Govt. which, by virtue of the proviso to Patents & Designs Act, 1919, s. 8, entitled the Govt. to make use of it thereafter without payment. On the question how the costs ought to be borne :—Held : (1) under that part of Patents & Designs Act, 1919, which authorised proceedings against a Govt. department, there was no express mention of costs, & the authority to deal with them was derived from the general jurisdiction of the ct., & the ct. had, therefore, no authority to depart from the common law rule that the Crown neither paid nor received costs, unless the special circumstances of the particular case justified it in so doing ; (2) having regard to the orders that had been made before the hearing of the motion, & particularly to the two orders for security for costs, the ct. would infer an agreement between the parties that each of them should be treated as ordinary litigants as regarded liability for costs.—Re Letters Patent No. 139,207, Re CARBONIT AKT., [1924] 2 Ch. 53 ; 93 L. J. Ch. 309 ; 131 L. T. 89 ; 40 T. L. R. 421 ; 68 Sol. Jo. 476 ; 41 R. P. O. 203, C. A.

499a. — Under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48)—“Direct loss or damage.”—What is.—Claimants carried on business as motor garage proprietors in Dublin, where they owned & occupied extensive premises peculiarly well suited to their purposes. These premises were taken by the Govt. under powers conferred by statute for the defence of the realm. Claimants, having tried & failed to acquire premises temporarily, took the only reasonable course; they bought other premises, fitted them for use as a garage, & transferred to them all the appliances of their business which they thus continued to carry on as well as they could. When the Govt. retired from possession of the original premises claimants sold the substituted premises. They alleged that the difference between the amount they had expended in acquiring the substituted premises & fitting them for use as a garage on the one hand, & the sum they received on the sale of the substituted premises on the other hand amounted to £3,429. They claimed this sum as an item of “direct loss or damage incurred or sustained by reason of interference with” their “property or business” within sect. 2 (1) (b) of the above Act:—Held: “direct loss or damage” may include consequential damage, & the item claimed could not be entirely excluded as indirect loss, but the amount to which claimants might be entitled in respect thereof must be assessed by the War Compensation Ct.—*A. & B. 526a. Power to impose payment for licence to sell ship to foreigner—Recovery of money paid—Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 1 (1).—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act in pursuance of his powers under Defence of the Realm Regulations, imposed upon suppliants as a condition of granting them a licence to sell a steamship to a foreigner the payment to him by suppliants of £30,800. By their petition of right suppliants alleged that the Shipping Controller had no lawful authority to impose a condition or to exact the payment, which suppliants had paid under protest, & that the Shipping Controller thereby became liable to repay the money to suppliants as money had & received to their use. The petition of right was not brought within one year from the termination of the war or within one year from the exaction of the money. The Crown demurred to the petition, on the ground that the case if founded on the alleged tort of the Shipping Controller was barred by the above sub-sect., & it based on an alleged breach of contract, the proceedings not having been brought within the prescribed time failed under proviso (b) of that sub-sect. A further ground of demurrer was that a petition of right would not lie against the Crown for tort, for the King could do no wrong. Suppliants contended that they were entitled to waive the tort & to sue for money had & received by the Shipping Controller & now in the hands of the Crown, & that their claim so grounded was not a proceeding for or in respect or on account of any act of the Shipping Controller, & therefore was not within the terms of the Act :—Held : the allegation that suppliants' money had been extorted from them by the wrongful act of the Shipping Controller was an essential part of suppliants' case, from which the claim for money had & received arose ; & as such act was one to which the above sub-sect. applied, the petition of right was barred by that sub-sect.—BRISTOL CHANNEL STEAMERS, LTD. v. R. (1924), 131 L. T. 608 ; 40 T. L. R. 550 ; 68 Sol. Jo. 771.

526b. — — —.]—The Shipping Controller, purporting to act under the authority of Defence of the Realm Regulations, required as a condition of a licence to suppliants to sell one of their ships to a foreign firm that they should pay a percentage of the purchase money to the Ministry of Shipping, & suppliants paid the percentage. On a petition of right to recover back the money so paid :—Held : (1) the imposition of the condition was illegal, & the payment was not a voluntary payment ; (2) the petition of right was barred by the above sub-sect. ; it was not open to suppliants, by waiving the tort of the illegal exaction & suing for money had & received, to bring the case within par. (b) of the proviso to the sub-sect., for the case fell within the exception to the proviso as being one in which a claim for compensation could have been brought under sect. 2 (1) (b) ; (3) (BANKES & SARGANT, L.JJ.) suppliants failed to bring the case within the proviso upon the further ground that the contracts referred to in paragraph (b) are limited to express contracts, & do not include the fictitious contract to repay money improperly extorted, the implication of which arises upon a waiver of the tort.—BROCKLEBANK, LTD. v. R., [1925] 1 K. B. 52 ; 94 L. J. K. B. 26 ; 132 L. T. 166 ; 40 T. L. R. 869 ; 69 Sol. Jo. 105 ; 16 Asp. M. L. C. 415, C. A. ; revers., [1924] 1 K. B. 647.

526c. — — —.]—Suppliants were required in 1919 by the Shipping Controller to pay £20,000 to the Exchequer as a condition of his giving them permission to sell a steamship to a foreigner, & they made the payment accordingly. On a petition of right to recover back the amount from the Crown on the ground that the demand was unlawful :—Held : as the demand was made in the bona fide belief that the Shipping Controller was entitled to make it & as he was purporting to act in the execution of his duty the Crown was protected by the above sub-sect.—MARSHAL SHIPPING CO. (IN LIQUIDATION) v. R. (1925), 41 T. L. R. 285.

526d. — — —.]—Transfer of liabilities incurred by Shipping Controller to Board of Trade—Whether action maintainable against Board of Trade.—(1) Ptffs. in 1922 brought an action against the Board of Trade for money had & received. The money which it was sought to recover was alleged to have been wrongfully extorted from ptffs. in 1919 by the Shipping Controller under colour of his office, & it was alleged that, on ptffs. electing to waive the tort, he would have been personally liable to refund the money as having been received to their use. By Ministry of Shipping (Cessation) Order, 1921, it was provided that the office of Shipping Controller should cease to exist, & that "All . . . liabilities . . . incurred by the Shipping Controller . . . shall be transferred to the Board of Trade." The "Board of Trade" is the name given by statute to an unincorporated committee of the Privy Council. On an application to strike out the writ on the ground that the Board of Trade, as a department of the Crown, could not be sued :—Held : the intention of the Order was to transfer to the Board of Trade as a Govt. department the personal liabilities, if any such there were, of the Shipping Controller for any wrongful acts committed by him in his office, & the Board was liable to be sued in respect of those acts notwithstanding that it was an unincorporated body.

(2) Although the Board of Trade may in the above-mentioned circumstances be sued as a Govt. department, service of the writ must, unless the solr. to the Board accepts service on their behalf, be effected upon the individual constituent members of the Board personally.

Held : the true intent, meaning & spirit of War Measures Act, 1914, s. 7, is to maintain & preserve to the subject any rights possessed by him at common law, & which he previously had notwithstanding that Act ; & that sect. does not confer upon him any new rights to compensation in addition to those which he otherwise enjoyed.—WARNER QUINLAN ASPHALT Co. v. R., [1923] Exch. C. R. 195.—CAN.

534a. ————,]—A British ship lying in a neutral port & laden with a cargo of timber belonging to neutrals of another country was requisitioned during the war by the British Govt. & brought home with her cargo to England without the consent & against the protest of the cargo owners. The timber was then requisitioned by the Controller of Timber Supplies on behalf of the Board of Trade avowedly under Defence of the Realm Regulations. 2B & 2JJ. The owners of the cargo made a claim in the War Compensation Ct. for compensation & contended that it should be assessed under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 2 (2) (iii.) (a), on the ground that in the circumstances they would but for the Act have had a legal right to compensation:—Held: (1) the regulations did not apply to a seizure of goods of a neutral brought into England against his will; (2) the requisition of the timber was justifiable as an exercise of the royal prerogative right of angary & was, therefore, made "in exercise of" a "prerogative right to His Majesty" within s. 2 (1) (b) of the Act, & inasmuch as that right involved the obligation to pay full compensation to the owner of the property seized, claimants "would have had apart from" the Act a valid claim for compensation by petition of right, & the Crown admitting that such a claim constituted "a legal right to compensation," compensation was to be assessed according to the principle laid down in s. 2 (2) (iii.) (a) of the Act. COMMERCIAL & ESTATES CO. OF EGYPT v. BOARD OF TRADE, [1925] 1 K. B. 271; 91 L. J. K. B. 50; 132 L. T. 516, C. A.

Legal effect expressly excluded.

By successive arrangements made before 1913 between an American firm & an English co. the American firm were constituted sole agents for the sale in the United States & Canada of tissues for carbonising paper supplied by the English co. The greater part of these tissues was manufactured for this English co. by another English co. By an arrangement made between the American firm & both English cos. in 1913 the English cos. expressed their willingness that the existing arrangements with the American firm, which were then for one year only, should be continued on the same lines for three years & so on for further periods of three years, subject to six months' notice. This document, after setting out the understanding between the parties, including several modifications of the previous arrangements, proceeded as follows: "This arrangement is not entered into, nor is this memorandum written, as a formal or legal agreement, & shall not be subject to legal jurisdiction in the law cts. either of the United States or England, but it is only a definite expression & record of the purpose & intention of the three parties concerned, to which they each honourably pledge themselves, with the fullest confidence—based on past business with each other—that it will be carried through by each of the three parties with mutual loyalty & friendly co-operation. This is hereinafter referred to as the 'honourable pledge' clause." Disputes having arisen between the parties, the English cos. determined this arrangement without notice. Before the relations between the parties were broken off the American firm had given & the first-mentioned English co. had accepted certain orders for goods. In an action by the American firm for breach of contract & for non-delivery of goods:—Held: (1) the arrangement of 1913 was not a legally binding contract; (2) at the date of the arrangement of 1913 all previous agreements were determined by mutual consent; (3) the orders given & accepted constituted enforceable contracts of sale.—ROSE & FRANK Co. v. B. & C. set up other defences which failed. The judge decided that A. having established an effective defence, the action failed as against him, but succeeded against B. & C.; Held: B. & C. though they had not pleaded it, were entitled to the benefit of a defence set up by A. which went to the whole cause of action, & the action failed altogether.

PART III. SECT. 1.

sk. Contract subject to approval—Effect of approval.—Held: the effect of a clause in a contract, which made the agreement subject to the approval of the Governor-General in Council, was to suspend the contract pending the giving of such approval, & upon such approval being given the contract took effect & became enforceable.—BANKS PENINSULA ELECTRIC-POWER BOARD v. AKAROA BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1923] N. Z. L. R. 880.—N.Z.

Sufficiency of approval.—A contract contained a provision that it should be deemed executed & become binding only when approved by the proper officers of the vendor co. Beneath the signatures of the contracting parties a form of approval was signed by certain persons as managers. There was evidence that they occupied these positions, but no evidence that they were the proper officers of the vendors for approval of the contract:—Held: approval could be shown by the subsequent conduct of the vendors.—GENERAL SUPPLY CO. OF CANADA v. O’NEILL MOISTEN MACHINERY CO., [1921] 2 D. L. R. 183; 1 W. W. R. 1047.—CAN.

the agent: “Send lowest cash price. Will give $1,600 cash. Wire.” The agent replied by wire: “Cannot reduce price.” Pltf. then wrote accepting the offer:—Held: the telegram reading “Cannot reduce price” was a renewal of the original offer, not merely a rejection of pltf.’s counter offer, & pltf.’s acceptance of it completed a contract of sale.—LIVINGSTONE v. EVANS, [1925] 4 D. L. R. 769; [1925] 3 W. W. R. 453.—CAN.

370 xiii. ———— Acceptance stating understanding of offer made.—The Halifax Graving Dock & plant were wrecked by explosion in 1917, & in Jan. 1918, the Canadian Govt. passed an Order in Council providing that the work of repair should be entrusted to applicants on the condition (inter alia) that the latter should contribute the amount of insurance it carried & the Govt. pay the balance. A letter was sent to the co. enclosing a copy of the Order & stating “an agreement is being prepared & will be submitted shortly for signature,” but no agreement was ever executed. Two days later the co. wrote to the Minister of Public Works that the terms of the Order were satisfactory & adding, “but in order that all will be quite clear our understanding is that we are to assign our insurances & policies to the Govt., & that the temporary buildings now being constructed are to be replaced by permanent buildings of the same kind as the original”:—Held: the letter of the co. to the Minister did not contain an unqualified acceptance of the terms set out in the Order in Council.—HALIFAX GRAVING CO. v. R. (1921), 62 S. C. R. 338.—CAN.

sn. Delivery of goods—Before time laid down in order.—Applt. sent an order on June 7 to resp. to send him on hire a binder, to be delivered on or about Oct. 1. The order contained a term that it was not to be binding on resp. until received & ratified in writing or by actual delivery of the goods to applt., & that the order might be cancelled by applt. giving notice to resp. by registered letter at least thirty days prior to date for delivery, with a proviso that if prior to that date or six months thereafter applt. ordered a binder from any other person, resp. might by registered notice revive the order, & deliver the binder within thirty days. An agent of resp. was told by applt. that he wished to cancel the order, as he was buying a harvester, & the agent notified resp., but no notice was given by applt. to resp. On Sept. 2, resp. forwarded by rail a binder to applt., & wrote him stating that the binder had been forwarded per rail. The machine arrived, & applt. refused to take delivery, but admitted he had received the letter:—Held: the letter did not amount to a ratification of the order, & a delivery on Sept. 2 did not necessarily imply a delivery pursuant or referable to the stipulation in the contract for delivery on or about Oct. 1, & there was no acceptance of the order.—BLACKETT v. CLUTTERBUCK BROTHERS (ADELAIDE), LTD., [1923] S. A. S. R. 301.—AUS.

This other agreement had been previously made on the same day, but it was not signed till the following day, & it was to remain in force for ten years unless certain payments were sooner made. A letter signed by a purchaser, addressed to persons who are the vendor's agents, but not mentioning the vendor, & there being nothing creating a contract binding upon the agents personally, is not sufficient to make a contract enforceable against purchaser under Stat. day purchaser's solr. in acknowledging the letter, stated: "The simple agreement arrived at herein appears in the first part of your letter, & I suggest that we can dispense with any further agreement."—Held: this letter constituted a note or memorandum signed by purchaser's agent sufficient to satisfy Stat. 1459a. —[S., a customer of bkpt., a stock-broker, became indebted to him in respect of Stock Exchange transactions in a sum for which bkpt., on Dec. 18, 1923, recovered judgment. Later, S. became similarly indebted to bkpt. in a further sum. On Jan. 15, 1924, bkpt. assigned both debts to W. to secure £500, & covenanted with him that, in the event of his refraining from giving notice of the assignment to S., he, bkpt., would, on payment of the debts or any part thereof, hand the cheque or other form of payment to W. In Mar. 1924, J., who acted as solr. for both bkpt. & W. in the matter of the assignment, on the instructions of both & without disclosing same, made an agreement with S. for the liquidation of the two debts, whereby S. undertook to pay the aggregate amount thereof by monthly instalments, the first instalments being allocated to the payment of the later of the two debts & the subsequent ones to the payment of the judgment debt; & S. further agreed to deliver promissory notes payable to bkpt. or order to cover the instalments allocated to the later debt. J. received the notes from S. as agent of W., collected the amounts as they fell due on the notes & paid part thereof to W. & retained the balance. After payment J. returned the notes to S. to be cancelled:—Held: the forbearance of W. on the strength of the deposit of the notes to sue & his acceptance of the instalments constituted sufficient consideration for the deposit of the notes.—Re WETHERED, Ex p. 2011a. — Knighthood.]—If a contract which is illegal as being contrary to public policy has any element of turpitude in it the parties to the contract are in pari delicto, & if one of the parties to the contract has been defrauded no action for damages can be maintained by the party defrauded, even though the contract is not of a criminal nature.

The secretary of a charity fraudulently represented to P. that he or the charity was in a position to undertake that P. would receive a knighthood if P. made a large donation to the funds of the charity, & undertook that the title would be conferred if the donation was made. P., relying upon those representations & in the belief that the secretary was authorised by the charity to give the undertaking, made a large donation to the funds of the charity. As P. did not receive the knighthood he brought an action against the charity & its secretary to recover back the money he had paid as money had & received or as damages for deceit or breach of contract :—Held : a contract for the purchase of a title, however the money is to be expended, is an improper & illegal contract, as being against public policy, & as P. knew that he was entering into an improper & illegal contract he could not recover back the money he had paid from the charity as money had & received, nor recover damages from the charity or its secretary, nor claim to repudiate the contract as being still executory & recover back the money paid. —PARKINSON v. The parties entered into possession, except that B. was excluded from a room which appts. alleged to be an office which B. was entitled to under the agreement. — Held: the possession of the office was not essential to the use of the premises as a theatre, & a refusal to give it did not entitle appts. to rescind. — *FULLER'S THEATRE, LTD. v. The jury found for plff. on the claim; & on the counterclaim they awarded deft. 20s., finding that plff. was guilty of negligence or breach of duty in not entering in a book the occasions when the patient was confined to a bedroom with the door locked, such entries being required by rr. 13 & 16 of the rules made by the Comrs. in Lunacy under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 338:—Held: as deft. had received a substantial part of the consideration, plff.'s breach of duty did not go to the root of the contract so as to be a defence to plff.'s entire claim, & judgment must be entered in accordance with the verdict. — *MEYRICK v. Absolute contract.]—By a contract dated Aug. 10, 1922, the sellers sold to the purchasers about one thousand boxes of Smyrna sultanias at 60s. a cwt. c.i.f. London, to be shipped from Smyrna by steamer to London during Sept. 1922. Smyrna at the date of the contract was in the occupation of the Greeks. On Sept. 9, 1922, it was taken by Turkish forces & shipment became impossible, with the result that the sellers did not ship any of the goods. The buyers claimed damages, & the dispute went before arbitrators, who stated a case for the opinion of the Ct. under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 7. The sellers said that they were excused from performance on the grounds (1) that the contract became illegal when the port of shipment came under Turkish control, as a state of war at that time existed between England & Turkey; & (2) that a state of circumstances had arisen which made the contract impossible of performance & that

The ship was requisitioned by the Govt. before Mar. 1, 1917, & was not released until Feb. 1919. to receive or discharge her cargo, the captain giving six hours' notice to the charterers' agents, berth or no berth. The exceptions clause excepted "restraint of princes, rulers & people." The ship arrived at Batoum, & notice of readiness to load was given, & days began to run. Owing, however, to a dispute between the Russian & Italian Govts. the ship was ordered by the port authorities to leave Batoum & also Russian waters, & accordingly the ship went to Constantinople. Subsequently permission was obtained to load the ship at Batoum, & she returned after being absent from the port a little over a fortnight. sale. Pltf. accordingly received a cheque for £1,000 from defts. & after receiving it she executed the second bill of sale, which stated that the consideration for it was £1,000 paid to pltf. In an action by pltf. to restrain defts. from disposing of the furniture comprised in the second bill of sale, pltf. relied on Bills of Sale (1878) Amendment Act, 1882 (c. 43), s. 8, & she contended that the real consideration was the payment off of the moneylender & the release of her furniture from the first bill of sale: Held: the consideration for the second bill of sale was the loan of £1,000, & as a cheque was a good payment until dishonoured there was no need to state in the second bill of sale that the payment was by cheque, & therefore, as the consideration was correctly stated in the second bill of sale, the action failed. — D'USEZ v. 4358a. Payment of rates on the rentcharge by occupier—Demand after Tithe Act, 1891 (c. 8).—At the date of the passing of the above Act rates upon a tithe rentcharge were due & in arrears, owing to the omission of the overseers to demand payment thereof from the occupiers of the land out of which the tithe rentcharge issued. The tithe rentcharge for the period in respect of which the rates in arrears were due had been paid to the tithe-owner in full. After the passing of the Act, the overseers, purporting to act under Tithe Act of 1837 (c. 69), s. 8, demanded payment of the arrears of rates from the occupiers of the land, who paid them, & were allowed the amount thereof by their landlord, the owner of the land, out of the half-year's rent next becoming due. Subsequently thereto a half-year's tithe rentcharge became payable by the landowner. The landowner claimed to deduct therefrom the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers out of their rent in respect of the arrears of rates paid by them:—Held: having regard to the Act of 1891, s. 6, the payment of the arrears of rates by the occupiers was a voluntary payment, & they were not entitled to deduct the amount so paid from their rent; consequently the landowner was not entitled to deduct the amount which he had allowed to the occupiers from the tithe rentcharge due by him.—*Re TITHE ACT, 1891, ROBERTS v. 4534a. — — — — ——By certain military regulations officers in the Royal Air Force were on demobilisation entitled to a gratuity varying in amount according to circumstances. If their names were on a certain list, called the Emergency List, they were only entitled to a gratuity at a lower rate than if they were not on that list. Deft. was a demobilised officer of the Royal Air Force. Pltfs., who acted as Govt.'s agents for the payment (inter alia) of gratuities to demobilised officers of that force, in ignorance of the fact deft. was on the Emergency List, but also in forgetfulness of the regulation which provided that the gratuities of officers on the Emergency List should be paid at the lower rate, & not appreciating the materiality of an officer being on that list, paid deft. his gratuity at the higher rate to which he would have been entitled if he had not been on that list. More than a year afterwards, & before notice of the mistake, deft. spent the money. In an action to recover back the excess payment as money paid under a mistake of fact:—Held: pltfs. could not recover on the grounds that pltfs.' mistake was not a mistake of fact causing the payment; & that as deft. had been led by pltfs.' conduct to believe that he might treat the money as his own, & in that belief had altered his position by spending it, pltfs. were estopped from 4590a. — — — To bank named by principal Money returned by bank to agent.] Pltfs. in London sold to a New York co. a quantity of Belgian francs to be delivered to defts. as the purchasers' agents in Brussels on Dec. 31, at a price to be paid in dollars on the same day in New York, & the purchasers instructed defts. to pay the francs when received to the C. Bank. On Dec. 30 bkpey. proceedings were commenced against the purchasers in New York & a receiver was appointed, & on the same day the purchasers cabled to pltfs. not to pay the francs to defts., as they, the purchasers, were unable to complete their contract. Before that cable arrived pltfs. had already paid the francs to defts., & defts. had paid them to the C. Bank. Pltfs. then requested the C. Bank to return them, & the C. Bank returned them to defts., with an explanation that they did so for the purpose of cancelling defts.' payment to them. In these circumstances defts. claimed that, the money having been returned to them, they were entitled to hold it on behalf of their principals, & refused to pay it over to pltfs., who brought an action to recover the francs as being money had & received by defts. to their use: Held: (1) as at the time pltfs. paid the francs to defts. the purchasers had already repudiated their contract, although pltfs. did not know that fact & consequently had not accepted the repudiation, pltfs. were under no legal obligation to pay, & having paid under a mistaken belief of legal liability, they would have been entitled to recover the money back if they had discovered their mistake before defts. had paid it to the C. Bank; (2) the effect of the money being returned by the C. Bank was to restore pltfs. to the same position as that which they occupied before defts. paid it away, & that position was unaffected by the fact that before redemand of the money by pltfs. the trustee in bkpey. of the purchasers had directed defts. not to part with it, & defts. in compliance with that direction had credited the purchasers with it in their books; (3) defts. were bound to repay it to pltfs.—*BRITISH AMERICAN CONTINENTAL BANK v. 5066a. Term customary during war.]—The ct. found that since the outbreak of war in 1914 it had been a universal custom in the dried fruit trade to insert in all contracts for the sale of sultanas a clause as follows: "Should shipment be prevented by force majeure such as prohibition of export, blockade, war, or any consequence of warlike operations, this contract or the then unfulfilled part thereof to be cancelled without claim." The ct., therefore, rectified certain bought & sold notes by the addition of this clause on the ground that the parties must be taken to have contracted on this basis.—CARAMAN ROWLEY & MAY v. - 16a. Dramatic work—No “first publication” within 1911 Act, s. 1 (3)—Owner entitled to substituted copyright under 1911 Act, sched. 1.]—Under Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833 (c. 15), a foreign author dwelling outside British territory was entitled to secure dramatic copyright within the British Empire of the first performance of his play given in this country. By an agreement in writing dated June 30, 1898, G., the author & sole proprietor of the right to perform a certain play, granted to plff. the sole & exclusive right to perform, or have performed, the play in Great Britain & Ireland. On Sept. 22, 1898, G.’s agent wrote to plff. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place:—Held: a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between plff. & third parties who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since, (1) being written by G.’s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result, & (2) it constituted an admission by delts.’ predecessors in title.

- (3) An entry in the register of first performances of dramatic productions at Stationers’ Hall is admissible in evidence as a public register. If such an entry is in correct, the party producing a certified copy of it may be precluded from relying on it as prima facie proof of a right to produce or reproduce the play to which it relates, but it can be regarded by the ct. as corroboration of other evidence of title.

(4) 1911 Act, s. 1 (1) (a) & s. 1 (3), which provide that copyright shall subsist in every dramatic work if it has been first published in His Majesty’s dominions, but that the performance in public shall not be deemed to be publication, prescribe conditions for the future, but do not inflict them on past events so as to destroy existing rights.

(5) Where the owner of dramatic copyright possessed [by assignment] the sole right to perform, or permit the performance of, a certain play before 1911 Act came into operation he acquired, by sect. 2 (1) (b), coupled with sects. 24 & 35 of the Act, sched. 1 to the Act, the right to the cinematograph & film rights of that play also.

An American corpn. made a film & sent a negative & two positives of it to an English co., who made further copies of the film & handed them to another English co., who let them to a British exhibitor. The American corpn. & the two British cos. were inter-working organisations linked together by complex agreements, & they all three shared in part of the receipts from the exhibition of the film by the exhibitor. The exhibitor in exhibiting the film, infringed plff.’s copyright:—Held: (6) the American corpn. & the two British cos. had actively directed, counselled or aided the infringement by the exhibitor, & had infringed plff.’s rights within 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), the operative effect of which sub-sect. is extended & not limited by sect. 2 (2) & (3).

(7) Where an infringement of copyright is proved under 1911 Act, s. 2 (1), the question of knowledge of infringement by the infringer does not arise except possibly with reference to the exemption from penalties for infringement provided by sect. 8 of the Act.—FALCON v. FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO., LTD., [1926] K. B. 393; 95 L. J. K. B. 118; 131 L. T. 246; 42 T. L. R. 91; affd., [1926] 2 K. B. 474; 96 L. J. K. B. 88; 135 L. T. 650; 12 T. L. R. 666; 70 Sol. 77a. — For type—Protected.—Pltf. co., which carried on the business of supplying cutter-crush machines & type & other materials used therewith, issued a catalogue consisting for the most part of a number of words which illustrated the products of the several sizes & shapes of type supplied by the co. & customers ordered a particular class of type by referring to such words. Nearly all the words were selected by the managing director of the co. In 1922 defts., who were carrying on a similar business, circulated price lists which were practically copies of the price lists of pltf. co., the words used in pltf. co.'s catalogue & price lists to indicate the style of type being copied in defts.' price lists without alteration. Pltf. co. commenced proceedings for an injunction to restrain infringement of copyright in their catalogue & passing off of goods which were not their goods as being their goods. On the question of copyright defts. contended (inter alia) that pltf.'s catalogue was a design or collection of designs capable of registration under Patents & Designs Acts, 1907 (c. 29), & 1919 (c. 80), & not the subject of protection under 1911 Act:—Held: on the question of copyright the contentions put forward by defts. failed, & an injunction restraining infringement of the copyright of pltf. in their catalogue was granted.—MASSON SEELEY & CO., LTD. v. EMBOSOTYPE MANUFACTURING Co. (1924), 41 R. P. C. 160.

85a. Programmes.—Pltf. were a limited co.

formed to acquire the Postmaster-General's licence for the establishment & working of broadcasting stations, & to carry on any other business ancillary, incidental, or conducive thereto. Under the terms of their licence & a supplementary agreement pltf. were required to transmit efficiently every day a programme of broadcast matter to the reasonable satisfaction of the Postmaster-General. They were not allowed to alter their memorandum as to objects without his written consent. He might revoke their licence if they failed to transmit satisfactory programmes, & within one month from their ceasing to hold the licence they were bound to pass a special resolution for voluntary winding up. Their profits from all sources beyond a $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. cumulative dividend on their paid-up capital belonged to the Postmaster-General. Nine months after the licence, with the approval of the Postmaster-General pltf. began publishing the Radio Times every Friday, including therein the advance daily programmes for the ensuing week Sunday to Saturday. These programmes gave the day & hour of each performance, the artist's name, appropriate headings for items or groups of items, & translations of unfamiliar foreign titles of songs or music. The preparation, arrangement, & editing of the actual programmes involved considerable time, skill, labour & expense, although the preliminary work of fixing the days & hours, engaging the artists, & choosing the items had all been done some time beforehand. Defts. having selected & copied numerous items from a set of advance programmes so published, pltf. sued for infringement of copyright:—Held: (1) whether there was or was not copyright in an individual programme, there was undoubtedly copyright in the compilation of the seven advance programmes; (2) although the programmes were subject to the approval or veto of the Postmaster-General, who had power to revoke the licence if they included improper matter, they were not a work "prepared or published by or under" his "direction or control" within 1911 Act, s. 18, & so long as pltf. were allowed to trade & publish them, the copyright belonged to pltf. & not to the Crown. (3) Semble: there may be copyright in an individual programme.—BRITISH BROADCASTING Co. v. WIRELESS LEAGUE GAZETTE PUBLISHING Co., [1926] Ch. 433; 95 L. J. Ch. 272; 135 L. T. 93; 42 T. L. There may, however, be copyright in notes appended to such a book, although there is no copyright in the text.—MACMILLAN & Co. v. COOPER (1923), L. R. 61

118a. Adaptation of old play—Original musical composition.—1911 Act has extended the protection of copyright, & there is musical copyright in an arrangement of previous music which amounts to a new work.
Pltf. composed music for an opera which was an adaptation of an old play. Defts. prepared an orchestral score from the same source, records of which they offered to the trade. Pltf. complained that defts. were passing off these records as records of pltf.'s music.—Held: defts. had borrowed from pltf.'s work in a way which was more than mere coincidence, & had infringed pltf.'s copyright.—*AUSTIN v. 197a. Automatic writing by medium.—A woman journalist, engaged as a medium in psychical research, claimed copyright in a production written by her in automatic writing & alleged to be communicated by a spiritual agent. Deft. was present at some of the séances & alleged that the communication was addressed to him. He claimed that the copyright was in him, or that it was a joint copyright, or that there was no copyright in any one:—Held: pltf. was the sole owner of the copyright.—*CUMMINS v. These sketches were shown by the author to defts. with defts.' name upon them with the view of being used by them for advertisement purposes. At the suggestion of defts. the colour of the costumes of the figures was changed from mauve to green & yellow; the colour of the lettering of defts.' name was also changed from red to green & yellow. Defts. ordered a number of the sketches so altered at a price which gave the author a very considerable profit. Subsequently defts. obtained a number of the sketches from sources other than pltfs.' Neither pltfs. nor the author had registered the sketches as designs under the above Act. In an action by pltfs. for infringement of copyright:—Held: (1) under 1911 Act, s. 5 (1) (a), defts. were the first owners of the copyright in the original sketches, as the sketches were ordered by, & were made for, them for valuable consideration & were "engravings" within that sub-sect.; (2) the sketches were designs which were capable of being registered under Patents & Designs Act, 1907, & as they were used or intended to be used as models or patterns to be multiplied by an industrial process, 1911 Act, by reason of sect. 22, did not apply to them, & as the sketches had not been registered as designs under the Act of 1907 pltfs. could not succeed.—*CON FRANCK, LTD. v. - 308a. — — — — —.]—Pltf. was the sole authoress of & owner of the copyright in a novel called "The Scarlet Pimpernel." In 1903 in collaboration with her husband, she composed a dramatic version of the novel. By an agreement dated June 10, 1903, pltf. & her husband, as authors, granted to defts. T., as theatrical managers, the right of production of the play during a then forthcoming tour, & at a first-class West End London theatre, for two years; & the agreement further provided that if the production took place within that period then "the entire rights for the United Kingdom, the United States of America, & the Dominion of Canada in the play became theirs inalienable, & they shall present it when & where they will within the countries aforesaid," paying to the authors 5 per cent. on the gross weekly takings. Defts. fulfilled the specified condition. In an action by pltf. claiming a declaration that she had the sole right to perform the work by means of cinematograph films :—Held : the entire performing rights in the play became vested in defts. by virtue of the agreement, & when 1911 Act came into operation the right so vested included the right to the cinematograph reproduction of the play; & therefore pltf.'s action failed.—BARSTOW v. The orchestra, which was paid by the syndicate, played the pieces in question. In an action for infringement:—Held: since on the facts the second def. had not authorised or permitted the performance within 1911 Act, s. 1 (2), plts. were not entitled under sect. 2 (1) of the Act to an injunction or damages against him.—*PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY v. 489b. — Effect of 1911 Act, s. 1 (2).]—The word “authorise” in the above sub-sect. is superfluous, & there is nothing in the sub-sect. which cuts down the liability under sect. 2 (1) of the Act, in respect of an infringement of copyright.

*Def.*s., who were the occupiers of a dancing hall, engaged on the terms of a written agreement a band to provide music therein. The agreement provided that the band should not, in the music played, infringe any copyright, & should be liable for damages & costs caused by any infringement. There was also a notice posted in the hall that “only such music as may be played without fee or licence is allowed to be played in this hall.” On one occasion the band played certain music, the copyright of which belonged to plts., without plts.’ licence; but *def.*s. did not know, & had no reasonable ground for suspecting, that this infringement would take place. In an action by plts. for damages:—an injunction: Held: on its true construction, the agreement between *def.*s. & the band constituted the latter the servant of *def.*s., & not independent contractors; the band on the occasion in question were acting in the course of their employment; *def.*s. were liable under 1911 Act, s. 2, for the infringement of copyright; & plts. were entitled to damages & an injunction.—PERFORMING RIGHT SOCIETY, LTD. v.

which were made by alterations of pltf.'s original drawings, but which had titles different from the titles of pltf.'s drawings. Defts. did not in any way expressly represent that the drawings made by such alterations were pltf.'s. Pltf. brought against defts. a passing-off action in which she alleged that her work had a distinctive character & could be recognised without bearing her name, & she claimed an injunction & penalties under sect. 7 of the above Act :—Held: to satisfy the sect. there must be a selling or publishing in conditions under which, to the knowledge of the seller or publisher, there was made either expressly or by necessary implication a representation that the author was the author of the work in the form in which it was sold or published, & since, although there was in many of pltf.'s productions a measure of distinctiveness, the mere seeing of defts.' productions did not necessarily suggest the inference that they were the unaltered work of pltf., the action failed.—*PRESTON v. 71a. Question of repairs—Under Increase of Rent & Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17).—Deft. was the tenant of a tied public-house with living accommodation, of which plffs. were the landlords. In 1910, the house was let to deft. at a rent of £75 per annum for three years. At all material times the ratable value was £68. After certain intermediate tenancies at rents less than two-thirds of the ratable value, deft. in Dec. 1920, took from plffs. a new lease: "To hold the said premises with the appurtenances unto the tenant from Mar. 25, 1920, for the term of seven years . . . at the yearly rent of £120." The reason for the increased rent was a trade revival which had caused a great improvement in the licensed trade of the house. The conditions of the new lease as to repairs were more onerous for the tenant than those of the old. In an action by the landlords for rent, the tenant contended that the repairing clause amounted to a prohibited increase:—Held: the question as to repairs could only be decided by the county ct., & the High Ct. had no jurisdiction on this point.—BRAKSPEAR (W. 139a. ——— Issue of summons before leave obtained—Irregularity.—On Jan. 30, 1924, a tenant of a dwelling-house within the Rent Restrictions Acts lodged two plaints in the West London county ct., the one under sect. 12 (3) of the Act of 1920 for apportionment of rent, & the other under sect. 14 (1) of the same Act for certain sums paid by him in respect of rent which, as he alleged, was irrecoverable by his landlord. These sums were, by sect. 8 (2) of the Act of 1923, recoverable on or before Jan. 31, 1924, but not afterwards. The claim for apportionment could regularly be brought in the West London ct., but the claim for repayment could not be brought in that ct. without the leave of the judge or registrar on an application supported by an affidavit. No affidavit was sworn until Feb. 5, 1924. Notwithstanding this the plaint was entered, a plaint note under the seal of the ct. was given to pltf., & a summons was issued, all bearing the date Jan. 30, 1924. By Ord. 7, r. 2, a summons to appear to a plaint shall be dated of the day on which the plaint was entered, & the date thereof shall be the commencement of the action:—Held: (1) the irregular entry of the plaint & issu. of the summons before the necessary leave had been obtained did not deprive the county ct. of jurisdiction to hear the action, but the irregularity could be waived by deft.; (2) as deft. had appeared to the summons & raised a defence in no way challenging the jurisdiction of the ct., he had waived the irregularity; the action must therefore be taken to have commenced on Jan. 30, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—PRINGLE v. - 373a. On jurisdiction of county court—Reduction of claim for damages—Alternative claim for injunction.]—Where an action, commenced in the High Ct., has been transferred to a county ct. under 1919 Act, s. 1, the effect of sect. 4 of that Act is to give the county ct. jurisdiction to deal with the matter equal to or the same as that of the High Ct.
- Pltf. & deft. entered into an agreement, which provided that in the event of any breach thereof by deft. he should pay to pltf. in respect of each such breach a sum of £150 by way of agreed & liquidated damages. Pltf. alleged that deft. had broken the agreement, & he brought an action in the High Ct. claiming the sum of £150 & an injunction. Pltf. afterwards applied, under 1919 Act, s. 1, to have the action remitted to a county ct., reducing the money claim to £90, & claiming an injunction in the alternative. The master made an order for remittal. Pltf. then delivered particulars of claim, asking for £90 damages or in the alternative an injunction. He admitted, however, that the real object of the action was to obtain an injunction. On the action coming on for trial the county ct. judge declined jurisdiction on the ground that in substance the action was for an injunction alone. On appeal to a Div. Ct., that ct. held that the county ct. judge had jurisdiction to entertain the action, & sent it back to him for trial:—Held: the decision of the Div. Ct. was correct.—*DAVEY v. 1. — Application under Administration of Justice Act, 1920 (c. 81), s. 3—Discretion of judge to order trial without jury.—On May 10, 1923, pltf. commenced proceedings claiming from defts. damages for personal injuries caused by the alleged negligence of defts.' servants. Defts. filed a defence denying negligence & afterwards gave pltf. notice of an application to dispense with a jury. The application for trial without a jury was made under the above sect. The county ct. judge, without giving any reasons for his decision, ordered the trial of the action without a jury, & pltf. appealed against that order & alleged that the learned judge had not properly exercised his discretion:—Held: the above sect. did not give the county ct. judge an absolute power to order the trial of an action without a jury; the sect. gave him a discretion which must be exercised judicially; in this case there were no proper materials on which the learned judge could exercise his discretion judicially; it would not be a proper exercise of the learned judge's judicial discretion to dispense with a jury merely because it was inconvenient; on the other hand it is not necessary for the judge to give his reasons for dispensing with a jury, but there must be some grounds for so exercising his discretion.—*WINN v. Further, the fact that the lists are congested is not a ground on which the county ct. judge is entitled to suspend a litigant's right to trial by jury.—*CALCRAFT v. The execution creditor did not admit the claim & claimant deposited with the bailiff under 1888 Act, s. 156, the sum of £26 which was considerably less than the value of the goods claimed, but was more than sufficient to cover the judgment debt & costs of the execution. The money was paid into ct. by the bailiff, who remained in possession of the goods & an interpleader summons was issued. Before the return day of the interpleader summons the execution creditor gave notice that he admitted the title of claimant to the goods, & the bailiff withdrew from possession. Upon the taxation of the costs the bailiff claimed possession fees up to the date when the execution creditor admitted claimant's title, upon the ground that under sect. 156 he was bound to remain in possession until the amount of the value of the goods was deposited with him: Held: as the £26 was deposited with & taken by the bailiff under sect. 156 of the Act, he must be deemed to have taken it upon the assumption that it represented the amount of the value of the goods, & therefore he had no right to remain in possession or to possession fees after the date of the deposit.—*NEWSUM, SONS & CO., LTD. v. On appeal on the question of costs:—Held: on the facts found at the trial there had been negligence on the part of pltf.'s wife, & therefore pltf. could not have succeeded whether 783a. Order for payment of possession fees of high bailiff—Under Ord. 27, r. 1 (2).—(1) A Div. Ct. has jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the decision of a county ct. judge who, under the above sub-rule has, on the application of the high bailiff, made an order against the execution creditors, who have directed the high bailiff to withdraw, for the payment of his fees.

On May 15, 1924, the high bailiff of a county ct. under a warrant of execution purported to levy upon the goods of judgment debtors at their premises, & put a man in possession. The sheriff was then in possession of the goods under process of an earlier date, but not to the knowledge of the high bailiff, as the county ct. judge found. The high bailiff on taking possession received from judgment debtors a document which stated that in consideration of his withdrawing from possession they authorised him at any time to re-enter & undertook not to remove any of the goods. On June 12,

1924, the high bailiff on the instruction of the judgment creditors withdrew from possession. The execution was ineffective, except in so far as it brought the parties into negotiation with a view to a settlement. The high bailiff made an application to the county ct. judge under the above rule, for an order for payment by the judgment creditors of his fees for keeping possession from May 15 to June 12. The county ct. judge found that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but was in actual possession & not in mere walking possession of the goods, & made an order for payment of the fees claimed:—Held: (2) the possession of the sheriff did not in the circumstances prevent the high bailiff from taking & keeping such possession as would entitle him to claim fees; (3) there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but kept actual as distinct from walking possession; & therefore the order of the county ct. was right. —*A. He stated that he was not guilty, in respect that by the incidence of temporary mental dislocation due to toxic exhaustive factors he was unaware of the presence of deceased on the highway & of his injuries & death, & was incapable of appreciating his immediately previous & subsequent actions. It was not disputed that the pedestrian's death had been caused by the excessive speed & dangerous manoeuvring of the car:—Held: if accused was otherwise in a condition which justified his driving a car, & if, through no fault of his own & for some cause outwith his control & which he was not bound to foresee, he became either gradually or suddenly not master of his action, through some mental defect, & was in that state at the time of the accident, the jury were entitled to return a verdict of not guilty.—*H.M. ———.—]—A person on board one of His Majesty's ships, which was then in commission & lying in the tidal waters of the Firth of Forth above the Forth Bridge, was alleged to have committed larceny as a clerk or servant to the Navy, Army & Air Force Institutes. He was placed under arrest by an executive officer of the ship, & some days later, by which time the vessel had arrived in Torbay, he was apprehended by the Devon police & charged before the justices, who committed him for trial at the Devon quarter sessions. The indictment charged an offence contrary to Larceny Act, 1916 (c. 50), s. 17 (1) (a), committed on the high seas. Prisoner was arraigned & pleaded not guilty & a jury was impanelled, but quarter sessions declined to proceed with the indictment upon the ground that Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 115, which was said to give them jurisdiction, did not extend to offences committed in estuaries or rivers in Scotland, & that the offence charged was properly triable only by the Scottish cts. :—Held : quarter sessions had jurisdiction to try the indictment inasmuch as it alleged an offence which, by virtue of Naval Discipline Act, 1866 (c. 109), was committed within the jurisdiction of the Admty. of England, & therefore, being an offence mentioned in Larceny Act, 1861, it was triable, under sect. 115 of that Act, in the county where the offender was apprehended.—*R. v. 1704a. — To rehear charge—Justices equally divided.]—Appct. was charged with the indictable offence of causing grievous bodily harm by the reckless & wanton driving of a motor car. The justices were equally divided on the question whether appct. should be committed for trial, & they decided that appct. was not, in these circumstances, entitled to be discharged, & that they would adjourn & have the case reheard on a later date by a reconstituted bench. Appct. then obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus to the justices to order his discharge in pursuance of Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (c. 42), s. 25:—Held: under that sect. the duty of the justices to discharge the accused arose only when they had reached an actual opinion that the evidence was not sufficient to put the accused upon his trial, & as they had not reached such an opinion, they were entitled to adjourn the hearing for the purpose of having the bench reconstituted, & the rule must be discharged.—*R. v. 2219a. ———.—Applt. was accused of having obtained sums of money by way of deposit from persons, who desired to be employed as managers of public-houses, by representing to them that he would appoint them to those positions. The indictment contained eighteen counts, relating to nine distinct offences, which were charged alternatively as obtaining sums of money by false pretences, & as larceny by a trick of the same sums. In every one of the counts relating to false pretences, the indictment as originally framed ran: "by falsely pretending that he would appoint . . . as manager." At the close of the case for the prosecution the judge thought it right to amend the counts relating to false pretences so as to read "by falsely pretending that he was in a position to appoint," etc. The jury convicted applt. on all counts:—Held: (1) the conviction for false pretences must be quashed, as the amendment of an indictment allowed by Indictments Act, 1915 (c. 90), s. 5 (1), is an amendment of a defect in form, & not the alteration & revision of the substance of a charge, such as had taken place in this case, which must necessarily prejudice accused; (2) the conviction for larceny must be quashed, because there was no evidence of larceny, as the persons seeking 3145a. ———.]—A judge in summing up is bound to put deft.'s case to the jury. A mere expression of the view of the judge is not sufficient to dispense with the duty of putting the case for the defence to the jury.—R. v. MARRIOTT (1924), 18 Cr. App. Rep. 74, C. C. A.

3156a. Indictment alleging several offences—Cases must be clearly distinguished.]—When an indictment alleges specific offences on distinct dates the jury should be warned to deal with each occasion separately, & not to permit inadequate evidence in the one to supplement inadequate evidence in the other.—R. v. ROSS (1924), 18 Cr. App. Rep. 141, C. C. A.

3156b. ———.]—Where an indictment for indecent assault contains a number of counts, each count charging a separate assault on a different person, the jury should be directed not to return a general verdict but to return a verdict on each count, & they should also be warned to draw a careful distinction between the evidence on each count & the evidence on every other count & not to supplement the evidence on any particular count by looking at the evidence as a whole.—*R. v. In such a case it is a misdirection for the judge to tell the jury: "You must take the case as a whole & not in bits."

(2) Observations on the practice of charging a specific crime & adding a charge of conspiracy to commit that crime.—R. v. LUBERG (1920), 135 L. T. 414; 90 J. P. 183; 28 Cox, C. C. 264; 19 Cr. App. Rep. 133, C. C. A.

Where there is not only no direct testimony of eye-witnesses that an alleged criminal act was committed, but there is the direct testimony of an eye-witness called by the Crown that the act had not been committed, & the Crown relies on a chain of circumstantial evidence in which the opinions of scientific witnesses are referred to as an important link, the charge to the jury should point out the importance of the distinction between evidence of scientific opinion & evidence of actual material facts & sufficiently remind the jury that such opinions were not testimony as to facts, & should specifically direct that the circumstances proven as actual objective facts must not only be consistent with the guilt of accused but must also be inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis which would leave him innocent.—R. v. HIGGINS, [1925] 1 W. W. R. 887; 43 Can. Crim. Cas. 384.—CAN.

a. i. ———.]—Statements as to powers of Court of Criminal Appeal.]—A judge in his charge to the jury made statements to the effect that "In the Ct. of Criminal Appeal, in the event of your finding a verdict of guilty, prisoner's counsel is entitled to have the whole matter reviewed." & "When a case goes to the Ct. of Criminal Appeal the natural bent of their minds is to give prisoner the benefit of the doubt."—Reft. the statements taken in their proper context, did not

321 i. Status of Judicial Committee—

Advisers of Crown. The Judicial Committee sit in the capacity of judges; their report is acted on by the Sovereign in full Privy Council, so that proceedings before the Committee are in substance strictly judicial. The Judicial Committee is not an English body in any exclusive sense; it is not a body with any location. The Sovereign is everywhere throughout the Empire in the contemplation of the law. He may as well sit in Dublin, or at Ottawa or in South Africa, or in Australia, or in India, as in London, & it is only for convenience & because the members of the Privy Council are conveniently in London that the Judicial Committee do sit there.—HULL v. - 427a. ———— Immaterial documents—Inclusion disapproved.—Documents not material to an appeal should not be included in the record. If one party wishes a document to be included, but the other party considers it unnecessary, the matter should be referred to the High Ct. or its registrar. It does not follow that because unnecessary documents have been printed in India they should be included in the books for the Judicial Committee. It is the duty of the solr. in England to make a selection of the necessary documents, the other papers being ready in case they are required. In cases of doubt, the solr. should take counsel's advice, for which purpose, on application being made, a fee will be allowed.

956a. ——— To make declaration as to validity of divorce—Granted on grounds not authorised by English law.—Resp. & his wife, applt., who were British subjects of the Jewish religion & resident in Egypt, were divorced by the Grand Rabbinate at Alexandria in accordance with the Jewish religion, but upon grounds which would not have supported a decree for divorce according to English law. Applt. brought an action against resp. in the Supreme Ct. for Egypt for a declaration that the divorce was effectual to dissolve the marriage. The Order in Council of 1910, by which civil jurisdiction over British subjects was conferred, provided by art. 90 that “in all matters relating to marriage, inheritance, or other questions involving religious law or custom the ct. shall, in the case of persons belonging to non-Christian communities, recognise & apply the religious law or custom of the persons concerned.” Art. 103 conferred “all such jurisdiction in matrimonial causes, except the jurisdiction relative to dissolution or nullity or jactitation of marriage, as for the time being belongs to the High Ct. in England”:—Held: applt. was entitled to the declaratory decree which she sought.—SASSON v. (ii) The property & all personal & proprietary rights & liabilities within the said limits of British subjects, whether the said subjects are within the said limits or not.” Rules of ct. made under the order contain a provision for substituted service, but none for service out of the jurisdiction. Applt., a British subject resident in England, contracted in England to buy from resp., who was resident in Egypt, a concession granted by the Egyptian Govt. in connection with irrigation, & for the employment of resp. in Egypt. Applt. repudiated the contracts by a cable despatched from England. Resp. issued a writ in the Supreme Ct. for Egypt claiming damages from applt. for breach of the contracts, & obtained an order for substituted service in Egypt:—Held: the cable repudiating the contracts having been despatched in England, the breach took place there, & the Supreme Ct. had no jurisdiction in the case.—MARTIN v. 51 iv. ——— No reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit—Death of young child in accident.—Held: a verdict of damages awarded to parents of young children killed in an accident arising from negligence could not stand, where there was no reasonable expectation of future pecuniary benefit. The lorry began to run down the incline & it struck & injured plff.'s daughter, a child, & plff.'s wife suffered a severe shock & died in hospital about ten days later. Plff. claimed damages under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), for negligence causing the death of his wife:—Held: plff. would establish a cause of action if he established that the death of his wife resulted from the shock occasioned by negligence involved in the running away of the lorry, that the shock resulted from what plff.'s wife either saw or realised by her unaided senses & not from something which some one told her, & that the shock was due to a reasonable fear of immediate personal injury either to herself or to her children.—*HAMBROOK v. Applt. failed to pay, & subsequently relinquished possession of the mine & surrendered the option without having done the work:—Held: resp. entitled to recover damages amounting to the cost of the work.—*CUNNINGHAM v. 147 i. Pain & suffering.—In an action for damages for personal injuries arising from negligence:—Held: items which should go to make up plff.'s damages were (inter alia) a sum, not to compensate for, but to represent the inconvenience of his condition, & his pain & suffering, past & future.—*COSGROVE v. If impact is not necessary, it is a question of fact in each case whether or not plff. sustained physical injury & whether such injury was the natural & reasonable result of deft.'s negligence.—HOGAN v. R., [1924] 2 D. L. R. 1211; 2 W. W. R. 307; 17 Sask. L. R. 37.—CAN.

The woman did not appear to have been actually struck, & she received no direct physical injury, but she suffered severely from shock. In an action of damages at her instance the judge directed the jury that, if by the fault of defts. pursuer had suffered nervous shock through apprehension for her own safety, they were entitled, in assessing damages, to include any aggravation of that shock occasioned by the fact that her companion was involved in the catastrophe. The jury found that pursuer had suffered personal injury resulting in nervous shock involving apprehension for her own safety, aggravated by anxiety for the safety of her companion, & awarded damages.—Held: in the circumstances the jury could not be asked to dis-

In an action for breach of contract the jury awarded to pltf., over & above her salary already paid, damages for loss of reputation through her not being employed to play the part:—Held: as there was an express agreement to advertise pltf. this necessarily implied an obligation to give pltf. an opportunity of acting, & pltf. was entitled, in addition to her salary already paid, to the damages awarded by the jury for loss of reputation.—*MARBÉ v. 152 l. Loss of or injury to property—Collision at sea—Loss of musical manuscripts.—In an action of damages against steamship owners, arising out of the sinking of one of their ships, pursuer claimed £15,000 in respect of the loss of certain music & orchestral settings in manuscript used by a concert party of which she was manager. She averred that the lost manuscripts were the sole copies of the compositions in question, & that she had the sole right to publish, perform, or issue mechanical reproductions, & to obtain copyright thereof. The compositions had cost pursuer about £2,000, but she averred that, through her concert party, they had acquired a reputation among the public which had greatly enhanced their value, & she further averred that she would have made substantial profits from the lost music in respect of copyright royalties, publication & sale, & disposal of performing & mechanical rights, apart from the use of it by her concert party:—Held: (1) pursuer's averments as to loss of contingent profits from copyright royalties, publication & sale, & disposal of performing & mechanical rights, were irrelevant; (2) the measure of her damages in respect of the lost music was the cost of its replacement as nearly as might be, ascertained either by the market price of actual replacement, or by consideration of the commission which would have to be paid to composers of music of the class to which the lost compositions belonged.—*REAVIS v. sk. Depreciation in price—Machinery components purchased by vendor to perform contract.—Held: the vendor was not entitled, as damages for breach of contract to purchase an ammonia gas compressing outfit, to a sum for loss through decrease in price of the parts purchased for the purpose of the contract, this not being a loss "directly & naturally resulting in the ordinary course of events from the buyer's breach of contract," as there was nothing in the negotiations for the contract to give the purchaser to understand that the vendor would have to go into the market & buy the various parts to make up the plant.—GENERAL STEEL CO. OF CANADA v. O'NEILL MORRIS MACHINERY CO., [1923] 2 W. W. R. 928.—CAN.

sl. Loss of custom—Defective goods sold but replaced.—Certain goods supplied under contract not complying with the warranted description:—Held: it could not reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties, at the time they made the contract, that pltf. were to compensate defts. for such loss of business as defts. might incur by the withdrawal of their customers on account of a few of the articles resold being defective, such articles being replaced when complaint was made.—*HAMILTON GELB & MACHINERY CO. v. At the end of the season M. was short of the quantity he agreed to deliver:—Held: W. was entitled to recover damages from M. for non-performance of his contract, & the measure of those damages was the profit W. would have made under his contract with the paper co.—*MONDOR v. Deft. was found guilty of negligence, but the action by S. was dismissed on account of contributory negligence. The ct. awarded damages to the wife against deft. - 215a. ———. ———. ———.]—Pltfs. bought a coat with fur collar attached, for re-sale, from deft. & sold it to a customer. Owing to the colouring matter with which the fur was dyed, the customer contracted a skin disease & brought an action against pltfs., claiming damages. Pltfs. informed deft. thereof & requested him to undertake the defence of the action. Deft. denied liability but never suggested that pltfs. had no answer to the action, with the result that pltfs. defended the action & a jury awarded the customer damages for her suffering, & pltfs. had to pay the costs of the action:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover from deft. the damages so awarded, together with the customer's taxed costs of the action & their own costs of defending the action as between solr. & client.—*BENNETT (SIDNEY) LTD. v. - 227a. ———. Several sub-sales.]—Defts. sold skins to pltfs., who resold to a sub-vendee. That sub-vendee sold to a second sub-vendee, who sold one of the skins, which had been made into the collar of a fur coat, to a third sub-vendee. The third sub-vendee sold to a woman who wore the coat & developed dermatitis on the face in consequence of antimony contained in the skin. In each sale the vendor knew the particular purpose for which the goods were required by the purchaser, & there was an implied warranty that the goods were reasonably fit for such purpose. The ultimate purchaser brought an action for breach of contract against her supplier, the third sub-vendee. The third sub-vendee defended the action, & in so doing acted reasonably; but in the result the ultimate purchaser recovered damages & costs against him. The third sub-vendee, who had incurred certain additional costs in connection with the action, claimed to be reimbursed by the second sub-vendee, & after some resistance, incurring further costs, the second sub-vendee paid. The second sub-vendee then claimed against the first sub-vendee, who after some dispute incurring further costs, also paid. The first sub-vendee claimed against pltfs., who, after taking advice, occasioning further costs, paid. Pltfs. sued defts. for breach of contract, claiming as damages the damages recovered by the ultimate purchaser, the costs on both sides in that action, & the costs of the intermediate actions:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover the damages which might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time of the contract; the parties must have contemplated that damages would be claimed, if there were a breach of contract of the kind that had occurred, by parties separated by several contractual steps from each of the immediate parties to each of the contracts along the line; pltfs.' damages should include (1) the damages recovered by the ultimate purchaser, (2) the costs on both sides in that action, inasmuch as it was reasonably defended, & (3) the costs of the intermediate actions, in so far as they were reasonably incurred.—*KASLER & COHEN v. - 235a. ———. Costs awarded in previous proceedings, but not recovered.]—Pltfs. sought to recover from defts., as special damage, the costs which they themselves had incurred in previous litigation in which they were defts. Pltfs. in the present action sent a motor lorry to be overhauled by defts. The repairs were carried out & the lorry was returned. Very shortly afterwards, while the lorry was in use on the highway, one of the wheels came off & damaged the van of pltf. in the previous litigation, who brought an action in the county ct. to recover damages against present pltfs. He won the action at the hearing, but the decision was reversed on appeal. He was a man of straw & unable to pay the costs incurred. Present pltfs. sued present defts. for damages for alleged breach of contract & negligence, & a common jury found in pltfs.' favour. After argument as to the right of pltfs. to recover as special damage against defts., on account of their breach of contract & negligence, the costs of all previous litigation:—Held: such damage was not too remote.—*BRITANNIA HYGIENIC LAUNDRY Co. v. Pltfs., a ship-repairing co., requiring a new intermediate pressure cylinder for the engines of a steamer which they had contracted to repair, obtained a quotation from defts., marine engineers. At the head of defts. letter was a printed notice, "All offers are subject to our usual strike & guarantee clauses, accidents, etc." Pltfs. ordered the cylinder, but after it had been delivered & fitted it was found to be defective. A new cylinder was subsequently supplied by defts., but owing to the delay pltfs. were not able to complete the repairs in accordance with their contract with the shipowners & had to pay them damages. In an action to recover the amount of the damages defts. alleged that the contract for the supply of the cylinder was made subject to "our usual" guarantee clause & that their guarantee clause provided (inter alia) that "the contractors shall not in any case be liable for any detention of the vessel or other consequential damages howsoever arising":—Held: as it was not clear what guarantee clause was incorporated, since the clause suggested by defts. was the clause in their usual engine agreement which was drawn to meet the case of engines being supplied to a shipowner & not to meet such a case as the present, & as it was not proved that defts. had made it clear that they intended to limit their liability, pltfs. were entitled to recover.—ALISON (J. - 10a. ———.]—An extension of British jurisdiction in a British protectorate by Orders in Council may be referred to an exercise of power by an act of State, unchallengeable in any British ct., or to statutory powers given by Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37), under which the jurisdiction acquired by the Crown in a protected country is indistinguishable in legal effect from that acquired by conquest. The Crown cannot, except by statute, deprive itself of freedom to make Orders in Council, even such as are inconsistent with previous Orders.

- Before the conquest & annexation of the South African Republic Swaziland was an independent native State, treated as a protected dependency of that Republic, by which it was administered under a Convention made in 1894 between Great Britain & the Republic. The Convention provided for the preservation of native law, & the agricultural & grazing rights of the natives. The annexation did not extend to Swaziland. Subsequently under Orders in Council certain lands in Swaziland were expropriated to the Crown, to the extinguishment of the use & occupation of them by natives under native law, certain lands being allotted exclusively to the natives:—Held: the Orders in Council were effective, even if they were not within the powers recognised by the Convention.—SOBHUZA II. v. - 20a. Power of expropriation in mandated territory. — By the Mandate for Palestine, dated July 24, 1922, the Council of the League of Nations, acting under art. 22 of the Covenant of the League, entrusted to Great Britain the administration of Palestine. Art. 2 of the Mandate provided that Great Britain should be responsible for "safeguarding the civil & religious rights of the inhabitants of Palestine irrespective of race & religion." In 1923 an Order in Council authorised the High Comr. for Palestine to promulgate such ordinances as might be necessary for the peace, good order, & government of the country, & were not inconsistent with the Mandate. The High Comr. promulgated an ordinance expropriating certain springs for the purpose of supplying water to Jerusalem, with certain provisions for compensation. In an action by the owners of the springs the Supreme Ct., sitting as a ct. of first instance, held that the ordinance was ultra vires, on the ground that it was inconsistent with the Mandate in that the provisions for compensation were inadequate. Special leave to appeal was granted, all questions of jurisdiction being left open. An Order in Council had made provision for appeals to the Privy Council, but only from orders of the Supreme Ct. sitting as a Ct. of Appeal:—Held: (1) the appeal was competent, since the jurisdiction under the Mandate was jurisdiction in a foreign country within the description in the preamble to Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (c. 37); (2) it was the right & duty of the ct. to consider whether the ordinance was consistent with the Mandate, but art. 2 had been misconstrued, & the ordinance was valid; (3) art. 2 did not mean that in every case of expropriation for a public purpose full compensation must be given. Natural justice required that in the absence of exceptional circumstances, fair provision should be made for compensation, but that depended not upon civil right, but upon the principles of sound administration, & it was not within the province of the ct. to consider whether an ordinance was within those principles. Further, the ordinance did make adequate provision for compensation.—JERUSALEM-JAFFA DISTRICT GOVERNOR v. SULEMAN

- 24a. — Grant of proprietary right in river—Canada.—By letters patent issued by the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec in 1910 under Companies Act of that province, applt. co. was incorporated for the purpose of carrying on the business of producers of electricity, & with power to construct & maintain dams in a river of the province within certain limits, after having acquired from the riparian proprietors the properties necessary for that purpose. In 1923 applts. not having then constructed any works, the provincial Govt. granted to resps. a lease of the water power & bed of the river within limits which overlapped those referred to in applts.' letters patent. Applts. brought an action against resps., claiming a declaration that applts. had a vested right in the river to construct dams, & an injunction :—Held : the action failed, since the letters patent contained no grant of a proprietary right in, or power to take possession of, any part of the river or its bed.—*UNITED MANUFACTURING CO. v. The membership of the Council is not limited in number. - 91a. Enactment preventing King in Council from granting leave to appeal—Criminal case.—

Sect. 1025 of the Criminal Code of Canada, if & so far as it is intended to prevent the King in Council from giving effective leave to appeal against an order of a Canadian ct. in a criminal case, is invalid. The legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada as to criminal law & procedure, under British North America Act, 1867 (c. 3), s. 91, is confined to action to be taken in Canada. Further, an enactment annulling the royal prerogative to grant special leave to appeal would be inconsistent with Judicial Committee Acts, 1833 (c. 41) & 1844 (c. 69), & would be invalid under Colonial Laws Validity Act, 1865 (c. 63), s. 2. The royal assent to the Criminal Code could not give validity to an enactment which was void by Imperial statute; exclusion of the prerogative could be accomplished only by an Imperial statute.

According to the well-settled practice of the Judicial Committee His Majesty is advised to intervene in a criminal case only if it is shown that, by a disregard of the power of legal process, or by some violation of natural justice, or otherwise, substantial & grave injustice has been done.

Applt. was convicted in Alberta of an offence under Govt. Liquor Control Act of Alberta, which did not incorporate sect. 1025 of the Criminal Code of Canada, & of an offence under Canada Temperance Act, R. S. Can., 1906 (c. 152). For each offence he was sentenced to a fine, & in default imprisonment. The Supreme Ct. of Alberta, rejecting contentions as to the construction & invalidity of the material sects., affirmed the convictions, but gave leave to appeal to the Privy Council. The Crown petitioned the Judicial Committee to quash the appeals as incompetent, having regard to sect. 1025. Applt. petitioned for special leave to appeal. The petitions were heard with the appeals :—Held : (1) each appeal was in a "criminal case" to which sect. 1025 applied, so far as it was valid; (2) in the absence of argument to the contrary, sect. 1025 prevented the Appellate Div. from giving effective leave to appeal; (3) sect. 1025 did not exclude the prerogative right to give leave to appeal; (4) the cases were clearly not within the category of the exceptional cases in which special leave to appeal was advised in a criminal matter.—*NADAN v. - 108a. — Question of substance, not of form.—(1) The Parliament of Canada cannot, by purporting to create penal sections under head 27 of the above sect., appropriate to itself exclusively a field of jurisdiction in which, apart from that procedure, it could exert no legal authority; if, when examined as a whole, legislation in form criminal is found, in aspects & for purposes exclusively within the provincial sphere, to deal with matters committed to the provinces, it cannot be upheld as valid.

Reciprocal Insurance Act 1922, of Ontario,

authorised any person to exchange, through the medium of an attorney, with persons, whether in Ontario or elsewhere, reciprocal contracts of insurance, subject to provisions as to licences & other conditions; & it was provided that actions in respect of such contracts might be maintained in the cts. of the province. A Dominion Act of 1917 inserted in the Criminal Code (R. S. Can. 1906, c. 146), sect. 508c, by which it was made an indictable offence for any person to solicit or accept any insurance risk except on behalf of a co. or assocn. licensed under Insurance Act, 1917, of Canada. In answer to questions referred by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario to the Appellate Div.:—Held: (2) the Act of 1922 was intra vires the province, since (a) its provisions were capable of receiving a meaning according to which, whether enabling or prohibitive, they applied only to persons & acts within the territorial jurisdiction of the province, & (b) although it might incidentally affect aliens & dominion cos., it did not deal with them as such, but was an Act dealing with contracts of insurance; (3) the making & carrying out of contracts licensed pursuant to the Act were not rendered illegal, or otherwise affected, by Criminal Code, s. 508c; that sect. was invalid, since, in substance though not in form, it was in regulation of contracts of insurance, subjects not within the legislative competence of the Dominion; (4) the answers under (2) & (3) would be the same if any of the persons subscribing to a reciprocal insurance contract was (a) a British subject not resident in Canada immigrating into Canada, or (b) an alien. In so answering this question no opinion was expressed as to the competence of the Dominion Legislature to enact Insurance Act, 1917, ss. 11 & 12 (1), whereby restrictions were placed upon aliens & British cos. in the matter of carrying on insurance business in Canada; but sect. 12 (2) was held to be invalid in relation to the subject of immigration.—A.-G. —In 1916, H. domiciled in the province of S. died, leaving no heirs or other persons legally entitled to his estate. Both the Dominion & the province claimed the estate as bona vacantia by right of escheat:—Held: as the province of S. was not at the date of its establishment owner of the lands, nor had any vested rights in the lands from which the province was carved, differing in this respect from the original provinces of Confederation, B. N. A. Act, ss. 102, 109 did not apply, notwithstanding Saskatchewan Act, s. 3, & in any event, these sects. did not purport to transfer any "property" or rights to the provinces.—R. v. In the case of two railway bridges, one of them authorised by dominion statute, which fell within the exception :—Held : (1) the right & power of safeguarding the navigation of the river passing under & alleged to be obstructed by them was also in the hands of the Dominion; (2) the rights & powers of the Dominion were not affected by the provisions of a treaty entered into between Great Britain & the United States in 1842, the Ashburton Treaty, which proceeded on the assumption that the Govt. of New Brunswick had power to make 164a. — Lord's Day Act (R. S. Can., 1906, c. 153) made it a punishable offence to run or conduct Sunday excursions "except as provided by any provincial Act or law now or hereafter in force." An Act passed by the legislature of Manitoba in 1923 to amend Lord's Day Act of that province, enacted that it should be lawful to run or conduct Sunday excursions to resorts within the province. Sunday excursions were not unlawful by the laws of England existing in 1870, which were part of the law of Manitoba by 51 Vict. c. 33 (Dom.):—Held: the Manitoba statute of 1923 being merely permissive, & not dealing with a matter brought within the criminal law, was competent to the provincial legislature under British North America Act, 1867 (c. 3), s. 92, heads 13, 10; & that being so, the Act was a provincial Act "now or hereafter in force" within Lord's Day Act of Canada; it was unnecessary to consider whether the Act of 1923 could be justified as Dominion legislation by delegation or reference.—LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE OF CANADA v. - 238a. Rule of English law as to parliamentary control of revenue.—Application in New Zealand.]—It is a principle of the British constitution, inherited in the constitution of New Zealand, that no money can be taken out of the Consolidated Fund into which the revenues of the State have been paid, except under a distinct authorisation by Parliament itself; a payment made without that authority is illegal & ultra vires, & the money, if it can be traced, can be recovered by the Govt.

- An agreement made in 1913 provided (inter alia) that the Minister of Railways of New Zealand, representing the Crown, should pay to applts. £7,500 when applts. granted a lease to B. & Co. The making of the agreement had been authorised by an Act of 1912, which empowered the Minister, without further appropriation, to pay to applts. out of the Public Works Fund such sum as might be payable in accordance with the agreement. Owing to an alteration in the scheme to which the agreement related, the Minister did not require applts. to grant the lease, & it was not granted. Nevertheless the £7,500 was paid by the Minister of Railways to applts. in 1914 out of a vote included in the Public Works Schedule to the Appropriation Act for the year, & the Controller & Auditor-General passed the sum as being so payable : Held : as the lease had not been granted the payment of the £7,500 was not authorised by the Act of 1912, & it was recoverable by the Govt. & could be deducted from a larger sum admittedly due to applts.—AUCKLAND HARBOUR BOARD v. - 265a. Recognition of existing proprietary rights—Effect of proclamation.]—After a sovereign State has acquired territory, either by consent, or by cession under treaty, or by the occupation of territory theretofore unoccupied by a recognised ruler, or otherwise, an inhabitant of the territory can enforce in the municipal cts. only such proprietary rights as the Sovereign has conferred or recognised. Even if a treaty of cession stipulates that certain inhabitants shall enjoy certain rights that gives them no right which they can so enforce. The meaning of a general statement in a proclamation that existing rights will be recognised is that the Govt. will recognise such rights as upon investigation it finds existed. The Govt. does not thereby renounce its right to recognise only such titles as it considers should be recognised, nor confer upon the municipal cts. any power to adjudicate in the matter.

The appellate ct. in India made a decree dismissing the suit & refused to certify under Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, s. 110, that the case was a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council in that it would "involve, directly or indirectly, some claim or question to or respecting property" of Rs. 10,000, or upwards. Petitioner contended that he had a right of appeal under the above words of sect. 110, since if the appeal succeeded he could proceed with a suit, which had been stayed, claiming Rs. 81,000 damages under the contract:—Held: without defining the meaning of "property" as used in sect. 110 petitioner's claim upon the contract was too remote to be considered as being property indirectly involved, & his petition should be dismissed.—*UDOYCHAND PANNALAL v. Special leave to appeal to the Privy Council was granted upon a petition alleging two grounds: (1) that the Supreme Ct. had not jurisdiction to issue a mandamus in the circumstances above referred to, & (2) that under the Criminal Code the persons indicted had not the option given by sect. 827 to be tried without a jury. - 127a. — — —.]—By an underlease lands & works were demised to the first defts. for the term of twenty-one years less one day. The underlease contained a covenant by these defts. that they would not assign, transfer or part with possession of the demised premises or any part thereof without the consent of the underlessor, & that in case of the breach of such covenant it should be lawful for the underlessor to re-enter upon the demised premises, & that thereupon the demise should absolutely determine. Pltf., the purchaser of the reversion on the underlease, brought an action to recover possession of the premises. By his statement of claim he alleged that the first defts., in breach of their covenant, had transferred, underlet or parted with the possession of the premises to the second defts., &/or the third defts. By their respective defences defts. traversed the allegations in the statement of claim. On a summons taken out by pltf. asking that the second defts. might be ordered to file a full & sufficient affidavit of documents, the judge, considering himself bound by Powis (Earl) v. Negus, No. 127, made the order asked for:—Held: there was one issue only between pltf. & the three defts., namely, whether the underlease, subject to which pltf. as he alleged derived his title to the possession of the land in question, was still subsisting or had been determined by the exercise by pltf. of his right of re-entry, & that being so, the well-established rule that the ct. would not assist a forfeiture by ordering discovery of documents applied, & the order made against the second defts. must be discharged. Powis (Earl) v. Negus, No. 127, overd.—SEDDON v. COMMERCIAL SALT CO., LTD., [1925] Ch. 187; 94 L. J. Ch. 225; 132 L. T. 437; 69 Sol. Jo. 159, C. A.

obtained an order for discovery, & in the affidavit of discovery it was sworn on behalf of pltf. that a document in his possession related solely to pltf.’s case & did not support deft.’s case, & the Supreme Ct. had refused an application by deft. for inspection of the document:—Held: on the evidence there was no substantial ground upon which to base a conclusion that the statement in the affidavit was made erroneously or under a misconception of the character of the document, & the application was properly refused.—SMITH, ETC. v. Defts. denied liability alleging that the loss was due to pilferage by an organised band of thieves. Defts. had called for reports from the first, second, third, & fourth officers of the steamer, in order to investigate the question of the management of the vessel & the conduct of their officers in the prevention of theft, which reports were in due course obtained through defts.' agents in China. 891a. ———.]—In obedience to general instructions issued by the Port of London Authority to the masters of their vessels that, in the event of a casualty, the circumstances of the occurrence were to be reported on a printed form supplied for the purpose, the master of one of the Authority's dredgers reported the details of a collision with a sailing barge belonging to pltf.s. The form was headed, "Confidential report for the information of the Authority's solrs. . . ." The report was sent to the master's superior officers, who passed it on to the manager of the Authority's insurance department, & he in turn sent it to the solrs. who acted for the Authority's underwriters. Pltf.s. contended that the report must be produced :—Held : there having been a collision it was to be anticipated that there would be litigation, & although the report went through various hands, it was made for the purpose of being put before the solrs. ; the report therefore complied with the tests laid down by BUCKLEY, L.J., in *Birmingham & Midland Motor Omnibus Co. v. Pltf. was the holder of 10,000 partly paid cumulative preference shares of £1 each in the co., & in Dec. 1925, executed a transfer of 8,000 of these shares to a transferee. Registration of the transfer was refused, & pltf. brought an action claiming a declaration that deft. co. was not entitled to refuse registration of the transfer & rectification of the co.'s register accordingly. Earlier in 1925 the co. had issued debentures secured by a debenture trust deed, in which the co. covenanted with the trustees that it would not in regard to 100,000 preference shares register until the shares were fully paid any transfer of any of them to any proposed transferee not approved by the trustees, & would not, except with the previous written consent of the trustees, release any of the holders of these shares from any money payable or which might become payable in respect of such shares. Pltf. alleged by his statement of claim that deft. co. had wrongfully refused to register the transfer, that the directors did not exercise any proper discretion under the arts., & that they had abdicated their discretion by entering into the above covenant with the trustees. Defts. by their defence claimed to have exercised the discretion under the art. bond fide. Pltf. sought to interrogate deft. co. by asking: (1) Whether the co. said that the directors had declined registration in exercise of the power to decline to register any transfer made to any person not approved by them or in exercise of the power to decline to register any transfer by a member jointly or alone indebted to the co.; (2) whether they said that the transfer was to a person not

515. For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph:—

— Acquiescence in obstruction of way.—

In 1870 a row of houses was put up for sale by auction in eleven lots. One of the conditions was that a strip of land fifteen feet in width, running the entire length of the lots & being the rear portions of the back gardens of the houses, was intended to form a right of way from the back garden of each house into Church Road, which bounded the side of lot 1 on the south, & that the lots would be sold subject to & with the benefit of such right of way, & that the respective purchasers should at the earliest possible moment remove the fifteen feet of end garden wall & form the right of way. This condition was recited in each of the conveyances. Lot 1 was conveyed subject to the right of way of the owners of the other lots & lots 2 & 3 with the benefit of & subject to the right of way. The purchaser of lot 1 let it for a term of fifty years, which expired on June 15, 1922, subject to the right of way. In 1904 pltf. took an assignment of this lease, & in 1911 he purchased the fee simple of lots 2 & 3, with the benefit & subject to the right of way.

Deft. was the present owner of lot 1. For fifty years from the date of the original sale no attempt was made to form the proposed roadway, the garden walls dividing the several lots remained intact, & the wall separating lot 1 from Church Road was not breached. Church Road was six feet above the level of the back gardens. In 1883 the original lessee of lot 1 in the course of erecting some stables in his back garden raised the surface of the strip of land at the end of his lot to the level of Church Road, with the result that there was a drop of six feet from that strip into lot 2. In 1919 pltf., in anticipation of the expiration of his lease, proposed to build a garage on lots 2 & 3. With that object in view he pulled down part of the wall which separated the rear portion of lot 1 from Church Road & erected gates there, & he also raised the level of the rear portion of lot 2; & subsequently he caused a car to be driven through the gates over the strip in lot 1 into lot 2. On the expiration of the lease deft. blocked up the gates & obstructed the way. In an action by pltf. as owner of lots 2 & 3 to enforce his right of way against the deft.:—Held: (1) until the land was cleared there could be no effectual creation of a right of way; (2) having regard to the time which had elapsed before any purchaser attempted to assert his rights under the original conveyance, the inevitable inference was that the arrangement made in 1870 had been abandoned by common consent.—SWAN v. SINCLAIR, [1925] A. C. 227; 94 L. J. Ch. 104; 132 L. T. 577; 80 J. P. 38; 41 T. L. R. 158; 22 L. G. R. 705, H. L.

cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to award damages in lieu of an injunction.—*LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. 1399a. —.]—In an action brought by pltf. against deft. society for an injunction & damages in respect of an alleged obstruction of ancient lights, the judge found that defts.' buildings when completed would cause an actionable obstruction to pltf.'s lights, but that no such obstruction had yet taken place, & he expressed the opinion that the interference with pltf.'s legal rights when the building was completed would be small, & could be adequately compensated by damages, but held, contrary to his own opinion, that he was bound by the opinion of the Ct. of Appeal in Dreyfus v. Peruvian Guano Co. (1889), 43 Ch. D. 316, that there was no jurisdiction under Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), to give damages in lieu of an injunction where the injury was threatened but had not been sustained, & he therefore granted an injunction. The Ct. of Appeal, without going into the merits, by a majority, upheld the view that the ct. had no jurisdiction in such a case to award damages in lieu of an injunction. The House of Lords, by a majority, reversed this decision, & remitted the case to the Ct. of Appeal to deal with it on its merits:—Held: the findings of the judge brought the case within the "good working rule" suggested by A. L. SMITH, L.J., in Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., No. 1356, ante, as that which might guide the ct. in exercising the discretion given it by Chancery Amendment Act, 1858, to award damages in lieu of an injunction; that was still the rule to be adopted by the ct. as a guide & was not affected by anything that was decided in Colls v. Home & Colonial Stores, No. 830, ante; therefore, there being evidence to support the findings of the judge, the injunction granted by him, contrary to his own opinion, ought to be discharged, & in lieu thereof an inquiry directed as to damages.—*SLACK v. — Approval of decorations & fittings.—

On the hearing in the Consistory Ct. of London of a petition as to the furniture & fittings of the Church of St. Magnus-the-Martyr, in the City of London, a faculty was granted for, amongst other things: (1) a second Holy Table; (2) an image of the Virgin & Holy Child placed behind the second Holy Table; & (3) a crucifix fixed to a pillar at a considerable height from the floor & near the pulpit. On appeal the Ct. of Arches dismissed the appeal as to (1) & (3), but allowed it as to (2):—Held: (1) the law was the same for every kind of sacred image in a church, including a crucifix or rood, & although such an image was not illegal per se, it could not lawfully be placed in a church without a faculty.
On an application for such a faculty, the question to be considered is whether, if the faculty be granted, there is or is not, in the particular case, a danger of the image being used for purposes of worship or adoration condemned by Article of Religion 22. After discussion of the kind of evidence proper to this inquiry:—Held: (2) there was a danger of the proposed image of the Virgin & Holy Child being so used; (3) an image used for purposes of worship or adoration was an ornament & was illegal, because not included amongst the ornaments of the church sanctioned by the Ornaments Rubric in the Book of Common Prayer; (4) a faculty authorising the erection of an image in a church should not be absolute, but until further order.
- (5) The other matter of appeal is the second Holy Table. The church holds, or will hold, between three hundred & four hundred people, & there are a large number of celebrations every week. In those circumstances it would be a matter of course to allow a second Holy Table, but for the exceptional character of the ceremonial & services of this church. I am not, however, disposed to interfere with the exercise of the learned Chancellor's discretion in this part of the case. I think there ought to be full plans & particulars of the decorations & fittings of & surrounding the second Holy Table, & these fittings ought to be subject to the approval of the learned Chancellor & to be specifically included in the faculty (SIR LEWIS DIBDIN). 3513b. Cost of investment of redemption money—Compulsory redemption—Jurisdiction of court to deal with.]—By a settlement dated in 1893 certain tithe rentcharges payable out of lands situate at W. were settled, subject to certain life interests which had determined, to the use of H. for life with remainders over. The settlement contained a proviso appointing the trustees of the settlement trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, & providing that a sole trustee should be competent to act for all the purposes of the Acts, including the receipt of capital money. In 1899 H. assigned his life interest in the rentcharges to G. In 1905 C. died, having by his will devised his real & personal estate to resps. & appointed them his exors. In 1922 applt., who was the owner of the land out of which certain of the tithe rentcharges were payable, in exercise of the power given him by Tithe Act, 1918 (c. 54), s. 3, applied to the Ministry of Agriculture & Fisheries for the redemption of certain of these charges, amounting to £48 10s. 8d. & 5s. respectively, & for the determination by the Minister of the amount of the consideration money payable in respect thereof. On Sept. 20, 1922, resps., in exercise of their option under Tithe Act, 1846 (c. 73), s. 9, signed a form of consent which had been sent to them by the Ministry to the payment of the consideration money to the surviving trustee of the settlement of 1893. A month later they wrote to the Ministry revoking their consent & requesting that the money might be paid into ct. The Ministry thereupon wrote to applt. directing him to pay the money into ct., which he accordingly did. On Feb. 12, 1923, resps. took out an originating summons for an order that the fund in ct. might be invested & the income therefrom paid to resps. or the survivor of them as & when received during the life of the tenant for life :—Held : (1) on an application to invest money paid into ct. representing compensation paid under the Tithe Acts on the redemption of rentcharges, there was no general principle that required the ct. to direct that the person exercising the compulsory powers under the Acts should bear the burden of the costs, but the costs were, under Jud. Act, 1890 (c. 44), s. 5, in the discretion of the ct. entirely unfettered by any such general principle ; the ct. below ought to have exercised its discretion by holding that applt., who had been brought before the ct. solely for the purpose of making him liable for costs, was not so liable, & to have dismissed the application as against him with costs.

(2) Seemle : there is no power in the Tithe Acts which enables a tithe owner who has once exercised the option given him by the Act of 1846, s. 9, to revoke or alter the exercise of it. Rc WARTLING TITHE REDEMPTION, [1924] 2 Ch. 123 ; 93 L. Exemption was refused, & on an information against resp. for failing, without reasonable excuse,

171. Negligence of education authority—Defective state of playground—

Applts. planted a number of young trees upon a portion of the playground of a school under their control, & erected wooden stakes with sharp & jagged points round each tree. These stakes were pressed into the ground & brought together at the top in the form of a pyramid. The area covered by the trees had become overgrown with grass, & in that area a hole had been dug, & the earth heaped up at the side of it, forming a mound two or three feet in height. Resp's daughter, a child of six years, when playing fell on one of the stakes, which pierced her eye.—Held: applts. had been negligent in not taking steps to obviate the danger, & were liable in damage.—TRANSVAL PROVINCIAL ADMINISTRATION v. COLLY, [1924] App. D. 21 S. AF.

o r.—Supervision of rifle-shooting competition.—A school board has a duty to see that the school premises are not used in a manner dangerous to the children. If it authorises or permits a shooting competition with rifles in the course of school sports on a holiday granted for such purpose, it must provide efficient supervision, including efficient inspection of the rifles used, & a breach of that duty will subject it to damages for injury to a boy caused through his having a defective rifle.—*WALTON v. 261. Duty to "maintain & keep efficient"—School transferred to local authority.—Trustees of a voluntary Episcopal school transferred it to the local education authority, the school then being conducted as a primary school, with a supplementary course. Two years after the transfer, the education authority altered the system & began to conduct it in sequence with a neighbouring school. In an action against the education authority at the instance of the former trustees:—Held: under Education (Scotland) Act, 1918, s. 18 (3), defenders were bound to hold, maintain, & manage the transferred school as a public school of the same character & status as at the date of the transfer & provide similar instruction to that provided at that date. *NORTH v. 262 ii. — — — Performance of duty disputed—Jurisdiction of court—Held: while questions as to due fulfilment or observance by the education authority of their statutory obligations were questions of fact which fell to be determined by the Education Department under Education (Scotland) Act, 1918, s. 18 (4), where the question involved the measure of these obligations, that was a question of law, with regard to which the jurisdiction of the Ct. had not been excluded.—*NORTH v. 263. Contribution by one education authority to another—Parents not residing in area in which school situated.—The B. education authority granted bursaries to a number of children of persons resident in Arran for the purpose of facilitating their secondary education. There was no secondary school in Arran, & the children attended Ardrossan Academy, which is within the education authority. Except for two months in summer, the children left Arran for Ardrossan on Monday mornings, & they were boarded during the week with persons resident in Ardrossan, with whom they lived in family. On Saturday they returned home, or the week-end, & they spent their holidays at their homes in Arran.

The A. education authority claimed repayment of the cost of educating the children at Ardrossan from the B. education authority.—Held: parents were entitled to recover the cost of the children's education from defenders. Notice of the proposed alteration had been given by the township council by posting fourteen notices, seven in each of the sections, & publicity was given in the public press, though not by advertisement containing the formal notice. On an application for a declaration that the bye-law was invalid:—Held: Public Schools Act, 1920, s. 15 (1) (b), should be construed as leaving the notice to be given entirely to the discretion of the township council.—RE HOYLAND & YORK (1923), 55 O. Unsatisfactory service.—Pltf. was appointed head teacher of a non-provided school in 1904, & in 1921 the Burnham Report was adopted by the local education authority. The effect of the adoption of the report was that pltf. became entitled to an increase of salary, & it was agreed that the payment of the "carry-over," i.e. the difference between the salary which pltf. would have received at the date of the adoption of the report by the local education authority, if throughout pltf.'s service the Burnham scale had been in operation, & the salary which at that date pltf. was in fact receiving, should be spread over three years. The education committee refused to pay the instalment for the year ending Mar. 31, 1924, on the ground that in 1923 pltf.'s service had been unsatisfactory:—Held: the local education authority had no power, under the terms of the report, 302b. ——— Onus of proof.]—The council of deflt. borough, as the local education authority, in pursuance of a recommendation of their education committee, made after exhaustive inquiries & discussion, resolved that the engagements of all married women teachers falling under certain specified categories should be terminated; & accordingly, notice was given to each of plffs. to terminate her engagement. Plffs., three married women, had for several years been engaged under contracts terminable by a month's notice on either side, as assistant certificated teachers in some of deflts.' schools, & were admittedly efficient teachers. It was proved that the object of the council in reducing the number of the married women teachers was to create vacancies for unemployed single women teachers whom the council trained for the teaching profession & for whom it was important in the interest of educational efficiency that teaching posts should be provided. In carrying out that policy, the council, with the view of minimising cases of hardship in the selection of married women teachers for dismissal, took into consideration the domestic circumstances & duties of the married women teachers & the earning capacity of their husbands. Plffs. sought declarations that the notices of dismissal were invalid on the ground that the council in giving them did not act bonâ fide with the intention of discharging their statutory duties of maintaining educational efficiency, but acted with the illegitimate object of providing employment for unmarried women without reference to educational efficiency, of obliging married women teachers to confine themselves to home duties & of preventing those whose husbands were in regular employment from increasing the income of the joint home :—Held : (1) plffs. failed to discharge the onus which lay upon them of showing that the policy adopted by the council of reducing the number of the married women teachers for the purpose of creating vacancies for unemployed single women teachers, & the steps taken to carry it out, were in excess of their statutory powers or were adopted or taken in pursuance of some illegitimate object; (2) the matters taken into consideration by the council were not irrelevant from an educational standpoint, but were material factors in determining, not only whether the policy ought to be adopted, but the best method of applying it; (3) as deflts. had acted bonâ fide & within their statutory powers, the action ought to be dismissed.—*FENNELL v. Amongst the voting papers was one containing a vote for petitioner, by writing his name & address on the voting paper, as a county alderman. Forty-four voting papers contained votes for resp. as a county alderman. Neither petitioner nor resp. had before the election declared himself to be a candidate at the election of county aldermen. Resp. declared himself to be elected amongst others a county alderman, & petitioner was not elected. was not right in alleging himself to have been a candidate at the election for county aldermen, as he had not been elected & had not declared himself before the election as a candidate for election, & the writing by the voter of petitioner's name & address on the voting paper did not amount to a nomination of him as candidate within Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 77, & he was not, under s. 88 of the Act, entitled to present a petition for the purpose of questioning the election of resp.—CAMBRIDGE COUNTY COUNCIL CASE, *FORDHAM v. - 42a. — Supply to premises partly outside area—Point of supply within area.—Defts. were authorised by the County of London (Northern Extensions) Electric Lighting Order, 1897, made under Electric Lighting Acts, 1882 (c. 56) & 1888 (c. 12), to supply electricity within an area adjoining the relators' area of supply. Sect. 6 of the Order prohibited the supply of energy by defts. beyond their area of supply, & Electric Lighting Act, 1909 (c. 34), s. 23, contains a general prohibition against supplying energy outside an authorised area. Defts. entered into a contract to supply a firm having a small part of its premises within defts.' area of supply & the remainder of the premises in the relators' area of supply. For the purpose of this contract defts. erected their apparatus on the part of the premises of the firm within their area, & the consumers' terminals, that is, the point where the electricity was passed from defts.' service lines to the lines on the firm's premises owned & controlled by them, were also on that part of the premises. The use of electricity on this part of the premises was trivial. In the circumstances the A.-G. brought an action on the relation of the relators to restrain defts. from supplying energy to the firm outside their area :—Held : the point of supply was the consumers' terminals, & as the firm's terminals were within defts.' area, defts. had not committed any breach of the prohibitions in their Order & the Act of 1909.—A.-G. v. COUNTY OF LONDON ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., [1926] Ch. 542; 95 L. J. Ch. 357; 135 L. T. 601; 42 T. L. R. 328; 70 Sol. Jo. 486.

ments of pltfs., & that they did not give them the power owing to the requirements of other customers :—Held : defts. could not set up the requirements of other customers as modifying what on the face of the contract with pltfs. made compliance with pltfs.' demands an absolute undertaking.—HOLLINGER CONSOLIDATED GOLD MINES, LTD. v. the Board of Trade, the B. Council transferred the undertaking to defts. with a provision for retransfer if defts. made default in their obligations as undertakers. By a supplemental deed of same date, made without the approval of the Board of Trade, defts. agreed with the B. Council not to charge higher prices than those charged in the adjoining borough of S. In 1911 the B. district & the contractual rights of the B. Council were transferred to plffs., the S. Corp., but defts. still remained electricity undertakers in B. Defts. having recently begun to charge higher prices than plffs., plffs. brought an action to restrain their breach of agreement. Defts. contended that their agreement was ultra vires both under Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (c. 56), s. 11. which prevented them from divesting themselves of their statutory powers without the consent of the Board of Trade, & also under the general law applicable to statutory undertakings:—Held: the agreement was a business transaction into which defts. might reasonably enter; it did not fetter the powers of defts. & was not incompatible with the performance by them of their statutory duties, & was not therefore ultra vires.—*SOUTHPORT CORPN. v. C. having died, was succeeded as tenant for life by L.:—Held: (1) on the death of C., the property which passed was the right to enjoy the benefit of the annual sum, & the case fell within 1894 Act, s. 1; (2) the principal value of the property should be ascertained under sect. 7 (5) (8), the special facts of the case being taken into consideration by the comrs.; (3) the duty must be borne by L., but on equitable terms, namely, it should in the first instance be borne by residue, which should be recouped by a policy on the life of L. to be vested in the trustees which at her death would produce a sum equal to the duty, & the interest on the duty & the policy premiums should be retained & paid by the trustees in each year out of the sum which would otherwise be expended by them on B. - 90a. ——— Trust established in England.]—By his will, made in English form, testator, who declared that the instrument was to take effect according to the law of Hong Kong where he was domiciled, devised & bequeathed his property, which was situate out of the United Kingdom, to trustees on trust to invest a sum to produce an annuity for his wife, to pay certain legacies & to stand possessed of the residue to pay the annual income thereof to his sons or son during their or his lives or life, & on the death of the last survivor of his sons in trust for his son's children. The tenant for life, who was the only son of testator living at his death, wished to borrow money &, at the request of the lenders, he appointed, in England, four new trustees of the will, three of whom were resident in England. Between 1913 & 1922, owing to the tenant for life's dealings with the trust funds, proceedings in the Ch. Div. were instituted & orders were made in connection with the administration of the trusts of the will. In 1922 the tenant for life died, leaving him surviving his widow & two infant sons, who were domiciled in Hong Kong but had been made wards of ct. by virtue of the proceedings in the Ch. Div. & the orders made therein. The trust property was situate abroad:—Held: (1) 1853 Act, s. 2, applied to a disposition of property under a trust established in England as the result of a foreign disposition, in the administration of which trust the English cts. might have to apply foreign law, &, as the trust was established in England, estate duty was payable by 1894 Act, s. 2 (2), on the residuary estate, except such part of it as was necessary to provide for the payment of the annuity to testator's widow; (2) succession duty was not payable, since Finance Act, 1925 (c. 36), s. 24, was not retrospective.—*A.-G. v. 96a. ——— Shares.]—Testator, a German subject, was, at the outbreak of the European War, entitled to stocks, shares, & securities in English, South African, & American cos. The certificates were in all cases situate in London, & the securities themselves were transferable in London at the outbreak of war, & at the date of testator's death. Testator died in 1915, in Berlin, being domiciled in Germany. By his will three-fifths of his property were bequeathed to German & Austrian beneficiaries, & two-fifths to British & Polish beneficiaries. In 1915 the will was proved in Germany by the exors. named therein. In 1922, grant of administration in England was made to pltf. By virtue of Treaty of Peace Orders, the whole of the interests of the German & Austrian beneficiaries became charged with & subject to the claims of the Custodian of Enemy Property. In 1922 all the South African securities were transferred to the South African Custodian, an exor. dative was appointed in South Africa to administer testator's South African estate, & estate duty in South Africa was paid by him in respect thereof. Some of the American securities were transferred to the American Alien Property Custodian, administration of testator's American estate was granted in America, & the securities were transferred to the American Custodian to be distributed by the American administrator among the beneficiaries. All the remaining American securities, with the exception of a small balance, were released to pltf. by the English Custodian. In May, 1924, pltf. filed a corrective affidavit, including therein those of the American securities which had been released to him at that date, & he paid estate duty & interest in respect thereof:—Held: (1) all the shares were locally situate in England & the administrator was bound to include them as property of which testator was competent to dispose, & was accountable to the extent of the assets he had received for the estate duty in respect thereof; (2) the basis of valuation of such shares was the price similar shares would fetch in the open market at the date of testator's death.—*Re ASCHROTT, CLIFTON v. At her death in 1918 the furniture was sold for £45,000, & the Crown claimed succession duty & estate duty upon the difference between the two sums from the trustee of the settlements:—Held: (1) the transaction was a bond fide sale between mother & son, & no succession duty was payable; (2) as to the claim for estate duty, there had been a "purchase for partial consideration" within 1894 Act, s. 3 (2), the consideration paid represented four-fifths of the value of the property at the date of such purchase, & estate duty was payable only upon one-fifth of the value as at the date of the death of the tenant for life; (3) "partial consideration," in sect. 3 (2), meant something less than the full & fair value as between buyer & seller.—Re BATEMAN (BARONESS), [1925] 2 K. 128a. ———.—"Land & chattels"—What are "chattels."—By an Act of 54 Geo. 3 an annuity of £2,000 was inalienably settled on Lord E. & his successors in title. In 1892 the redemption of the annuity for a sum of £55,890 was agreed upon, & that amount was paid into ct. & invested in the purchase of Consols. The fifth Viscount E. died in Aug. 1922, & the sixth Viscount in Feb. 1923. Questions having arisen as to the payment of estate duty, the ct. was asked whether estate duty became payable (a) upon the capital of the sum of Consols, or (b) upon the value of the interest of the successor to the title in such sum of Consols, & if estate duty became so payable, then whether, for the purpose of determining the rate of estate duty, such sum of Consols ought (a) to be aggregated with the other property, or (b) to be treated as an estate by itself:—Held: "chattels" in collocation with settled lands in 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), did not suggest personality generally, but those particular items of which were usually settled upon trusts that followed the devolution of the settled land, & the sum of Consols was not "chattels" within the sub-sect., & must be aggregated with the other property for the purpose of paying estate duty.—Re EXMOUTH'S ANNUITY, [1925] Ch. 280; 94 L. sa. "Interest in business"—What is—1914 Act, s. 15.—A father & two of his sons carried on business in partnership. By a re-arrangement of the partnership relations the father accepted £124,646 in full of his whole rights in the old firm & its assets, & agreed to allow this sum to remain as a loan to the new firm at 4 per cent. interest, on condition that, if called up by him, or in any event on his death, it was to be repaid by ten yearly instalments. The father contributed no capital to the new firm apart from the loan, but had an interest in the profits to the extent of a one-tenth share. He died in 1922, leaving a will by which he bequeathed the residue of his estate, including the loan, to his family, & estate duty was duly paid thereon. The two sons came to an arrangement with their father's exors., under which the sons agreed to repay the loan at once in return for a certain discount; & in settling with the exors., they retained in the business the respective shares of the loan falling to them, by crediting themselves with the amounts in the books of the firm. Within two years of the father's death one of the sons died, & estate duty became payable on his estate. His exor. having claimed a reduction, under the above sect., of the estate duty payable on the sum credited to the son in the firm's books in respect of his share of his father's loan:—Held: the father's right to repayment of the loan was not an "interest in the business" within the sect., & the sum standing in the son's name in the books of the firm was an interest in the assets of the firm, & was not identical with their respective successions to the title & to be paid without any deduction except for death duties, & a similar rentcharge was limited in remainder, in the event of any other issue of the fourth Viscount succeeding to the title, to the use of the sons of such eldest son & other sons of the fourth Viscount in tail male. Subject to such rentcharge, the L. settled estates were limited to the use of pttf. for life with remainder to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. By a deed poll dated Oct. 15, 1913, provision was made for the abatement of the £50,000 rentcharge in certain events. The third Viscount, who was tenant for life of the estates in question, had died in 1923, while nine of the sixteen half-yearly instalments of estate duty payable in respect of the death of the second Viscount, who had died in 1919, remained unpaid. One of the questions for the decision of the ct. at the original hearing of the summons (Re Portman (Viscount), No. 249, post) was as to what proportion of the balance remaining unpaid at the death of the third Viscount of the estate duty, which became assessable on the death of the second Viscount in respect of the L. estates, should be borne by the yearly rentcharge of £50,000, & it was admitted in argument that there was no difference in principle in respect of that unpaid balance between that duty & that which was assessable upon the death of the third Viscount. After judgment had been delivered & before the minutes had been finally drawn up, leave was given to withdraw the admission made in argument as aforesaid, & it was directed that the question with regard to the liability of the rentcharge in respect of the unpaid instalments of estate duty assessable on the death of the second Viscount should be argued:—Held: the effect of 1894 Act, s. 14 (1), was to throw the incidence of the duty ratably & in proper proportions upon all persons becoming beneficially interested in the property upon which the duty was constituted a first charge by force of sect. 9 (1) of the Act; the rentcharge, or the abated rentcharge, must be dealt with, as regards these unpaid instalments, in the manner indicated in the original judgment; & the order would be in the terms of the minutes prepared in accordance with that judgment.—Re PORTMAN (VISCOUNT) (No. 2), [1925] Ch. 294; 94 L. Completion did not take place, & pltf. demanded the above balance from debt. & brought an action against him to recover it. The vendor claimed that pltf. was liable to him for £100 damages & directed debt. not to pay over that sum to pltf. Debt. thereupon issued an interpleader summons in respect of the £100, & the master directed an issue, & ordered that debt. should pay into ct. the £100 less his costs. On the trial of the issue the vendor's claim was dismissed. Pltf. then obtained leave to sign judgment for £390, for which debt. admitted liability. Pltf. now claimed the additional £100 in full without any deduction of debt.'s costs. Debt. contended that the master's order allowing debt. to deduct his costs was final :—Held : the master's order allowing the deduction of costs was not res judicata, but merely relieved debt. from paying the full £100 until the decision of the interpleader issue & the

With a view to selling the distillery as a going concern the liquidator continued distilling up to Mar. 31, 1921, but not after, & pending the sale of the business he sold the co.'s stocks of whiskey as opportunity offered. Such sales of whiskey extended over a period of more than two years. An assessment to income tax was made upon the co. for the year 1921-22 in respect of the profits of its business on the footing that the liquidator was carrying on the trade in that year. This assessment was discharged by the Special Comrs. on appeal on the ground that an assessment on the co. for the preceding year had been discharged by the recorder on appeal to him from the determination of the Special Comrs., & that they were bound to follow his decision:—Held: the Special Comrs. were not bound by the decision of the recorder regarding the 1920-21 appeal to discharge the 1921-22 assessment.—EDWARDS v. In a previous action the patent had been attacked only on the ground of prior publication of two specifications, G. & V., & the issue of infringement had not been contested. On Sept. 22, 1898, G.'s agent wrote to plff. stating that the play had been first performed in Great Britain on a certain date & at a certain place. Held: a copy of the letter of Sept. 22, 1898, the original having been lost, was admissible as evidence in a copyright action between plff. & third parties, who claimed a right to produce cinematograph films of the play under an agreement for value with G., dated Sept. 6, 1919, to prove that the first performance of the play took place in this country as stated in the letter since (a) being written by G.'s agent, it constituted an admission by G., a person who, although not named on the record, had a substantial interest in the result; & (b) it constituted an admission by defts.' predecessors in title.

In taking those inquiries before the master it became necessary to prove the lawful marriage of the parents of the intestate before her birth &, as no record of the marriage could be found, a summons was taken out by plffs. for the determination of the question whether three certificates of birth of three of the children, including the intestate, of those parents & a certificate of death of one of those children were prima facie or any evidence of the lawful marriage of the parents:—Held: the certificates were admissible, but not alone sufficient, because taken by themselves they did not identify the persons therein mentioned. The question is whether the papers are independent or interdependent.
- Testator left two wills, one English, the other American; the latter dealt exclusively with property outside the English jurisdiction, but the two documents were interdependent with regard to the residue, which was liable for English estate duty. The exors. of the two wills were different persons. Testator had expressly directed that the American will should be “probated” in America:—Held: (1) the two wills & a codicil to the English will should all be proved in England; (2) the document to be retained in the English Probate Registry as evidence of the testamentary act of making the American will should be an examined & sealed copy of that will, & after probate the original American will should be handed out to the exors. named therein for probate in America. —In the Estate of TODD, [1926] P. 173; 95 L. 3127a. ————The proviso to R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, that nothing in that rule contained shall deprive an exor. who has not unreasonably instituted or carried on or resisted any proceedings, of any right to costs out of a particular estate or fund to which he would be entitled according to the rules theretofore acted upon in the Chancery Div., governs the case of bare exors. who reasonably propound a will & codicil, even if, though the will is pronounced for, the codicil is pronounced against. The position of such exors. differs from that of persons named as exors. in a testamentary paper which they unsuccessfully propound. Having established the validity of the will, & made good their position as testator's exors., they are entitled to their costs of the litigation out of the estate as between solr. & client, & can be deprived of that right, which rests substantially upon contract, only if they have acted culpably or unreasonably. Until that has been established, their costs are not in the discretion of the ct., & notwithstanding Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 60), s. 49, repealed & re-enacted by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 31 (1) (h), an appeal lies without leave from an order condemning them in costs or depriving them of costs out of the estate.—*In the Estate of PLANT, WILD v. 5594a. Direction in will for payment of "money secured on mortgage" out of residue—Balance of unpaid purchase-money.—Testator, who at the date of his will in 1912 was the owner of several freehold properties, one of which was subject to a mtge. & of leasehold & other personal estate, gave & bequeathed all the freehold & leasehold properties of which he might die possessed upon trusts in favour of certain of his grandchildren & great-grandchildren, & the residue of his estate upon trust for sale & conversion; he then directed that his trustees should out of the money thereby produced pay (inter alia) his debts & legacies, & should out of the residue of such money pay & discharge "any sum of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold properties," & should stand possessed of the residue of such money in trust to divide same as therein mentioned. After the date of his will testator paid off the mtge. & took a reconveyance of the mortgaged property. Shortly before his death, in June & Oct. 1917, testator contracted to purchase certain freehold properties in respect of which he paid deposits, leaving balances of the purchase-money owing to the respective vendors. On Dec. 23, 1917, testator made a final codicil, by which, after revoking the appointment of one of his exors. & bequeathing a legacy, he confirmed his will in all other respects. Testator died on Dec. 26, 1917, without having completed the purchases or paid the balances of the purchase-money, & shortly after his death his exors. completed the purchases & paid the balances of the purchase-money; whereupon the question arose whether, as between the persons claiming under testator's will, those balances ought to be borne by the freehold properties of testator in respect of which same were payable, or ought to be satisfied out of his residuary estate:—Held: (1) inasmuch as a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money differs essentially from a mtge., even in the modern & wider sense of that term, upon the true construction of the will in the absence of any context enlarging the meaning of the term "mtge.," the balances of the unpaid purchase-money owing at testator's death were not "sums of money secured on mtge.," & no contrary intention was signified by the direction in the will to pay & discharge such sums out of testator's residuary estate, so as to exclude the operation of 1854 Act, which by virtue of 1867 Act, s. 2, extends to a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money; with the result that the balances in question ought to be borne by & satisfied out of the freehold properties in respect of which same were payable, & the devisees thereof were not entitled to have those balances discharged out of testator's residuary estate; (2) the confirmation of the will by the last codicil thereto, although executed after the mtge. on testator's freehold property had been paid off & after the vendor's lien had arisen, had not the effect of extending the meaning of the words "any sums of money secured on mtge. of any of my freehold & leasehold properties," so as to include the balances of unpaid purchase-money in question.—*Re BERNSTEIN, BARNETT v.  76a. — Machinery equally safe fenced or unfenced—Overhead shaft.—Resps. were the occupiers of a factory in which was a machine driven by a pulley fixed on a horizontal shaft, which formed part of the mill gearing. The driving belt slipped off the pulley & an employee of resps. attempted to put it back while the shaft was running & sustained injuries. The shaft & pulley were about thirteen feet from the floor & they were not fenced or guarded. In attempting to put on the belt the workman stood on a beam about seven feet from the floor, & was acting contrary to resps.' instructions. Resps. were summoned for not having the shaft fenced, but the justices, being of opinion that any fence would have been useless owing to the shaft being thirteen feet above the ground, dismissed the case :—Held : the finding of the justices was not equivalent to a finding that the shaft was "in such position or of such construction as to be equally safe to every person employed or working in the factory as it would be if it were securely fenced," which was the requirement of 1901 Act, s. 10 (1) (c), & there would have been no evidence to support the latter finding.—ATKINSON v. did not reach a degree sufficient to justify that part being classified as "dangerous"; (2) in any event, to secure a conviction, facts must be established to support the second branch of the complaint, & on the facts, the charge was not proven.—LAUDER v. FERRIES.

Part I.—Definition and Nature of Ferries.

For the paragraph in the original volume substitute the following paragraph:—

—.]—Defts., under a statute of 1791, built a toll-bridge in place of an ancient ferry on a public highway, & also approaches which by the Act were to be considered as part & parcel of the bridge. Pltfs., the county council, owned land adjoining one of the approaches & built a school on it. Defts. denied pltfs.' right to free access to the school over the approach:—Held: as the old highway consisted of the approaches to the ferry plus the passage across the river, & the substituted highway consisted of the approaches to the bridge plus the bridge, & as the old approaches were highways to which owners would be entitled to access, the substituted approaches were highways by which adjoining owners had similar rights of access, & defts.' claim was ill founded.—YORKSHIRE, EAST RIDING, COUNTY COUNCIL v. SELBY BRIDGE CO. OF PROPRIETORS, [1925] Ch. 841; 95 L. J. Ch. 86; 133 L. T. 628; 41 T. L. R. 602; 69 Sol. Jo. 775; 23 L. G. R. 547.

— Persons able to cross on foot at low water.—(1) Held: a franchise ferry between South Benfleet & Canvey Island had been granted to pltfs.' predecessors in title.

If, as appears to be established by the authorities, a present fraudulent intention to prefer one creditor over the others is not sufficient under the statute to avoid a conveyance to that creditor, unless the debtor is himself in some way benefited by the conveyance, I am unable to see how the conveyance is avoided merely because the debtor always had the intention to prefer the creditor at some time or another (ROMER, J.).—*Re LLOYD'S FURNITURE PALACE, LTD., EVANS v. If there is, in fact, in the possession of the creditor such a counter-security, it is the duty of the creditor, whether its existence is known to the surety or not, to exercise reasonable care in maintaining it for the benefit of the surety, so as to be available, unimpaired by reason of any negligence,

One of the terms was that pltfs. "agree & undertake

When pltfs. were using the gangway some trucks were shunted down the line, & the gangway was destroyed. - 355a. ———.]—The purchaser of land sold "subject to rights of way," after an unsuspected right of way had been established on behalf of the public, brought an action against the vendor for breach of the implied covenants expressed by his having conveyed as "beneficial owner." The vendor's covenant being qualified, the question turned upon whether there had been dedication of the right subsequently to 1782, the date of the last purchase for value by those through whom the vendor claimed. Pltf. produced two tithe maps, made respectively in 1802 & 1840, in neither of which was the right of way marked :—Held : the tithe maps were made for a special purpose, & not for the purpose of showing public or private rights other than as regards tithe ; they were not, therefore, prima facie evidence enabling pltf. to contend that the dedication was at a subsequent date, so as to shift upon deft. the onus of proving that the dedication was prior to 1782. — STONE V. Part VI.—Repair of Highways.

786a. — Increased burden of traffic.—
 A road was constructed by plff. corp'n. under powers conferred by a private Act of 1875, which enacted that the road should be constructed according to a certain specification & that it should thereafter be maintained at plffs.' expense. The road was completed in 1878 as a waterbound macadamised road in accordance with the statutory requirements, & was fully maintained by them for many years, but ultimately it deteriorated owing to the increase of traffic of a kind unknown in 1878, & unless resort was had to tar-spraying, or to some similar modern expedient, the existing traffic would rapidly destroy the road: Held: plffs. were liable only to maintain the road in the condition in which it was completed in 1878, & they were not liable for the cost of providing for all modern means of locomotion by reconstructing the fabric of the road so as to be entirely different in formation from the road which was the subject-matter of the obligation imposed by the Act.—*MANCHESTER CORPN. v. 1146a. — Removal of footway.—A municipal corp'n., in exercise of its powers as highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 149, widened a narrow street in the town by entirely removing a raised & kerbed footway on one side, & throwing its site into the carriage-way without any notice to or consent of the owner of the adjoining house & premises, who was also owner of one-half of the soil of the road. The owner brought an action in the county ct. for a mandatory order to restore the footway, & for damages for injury to his property. It was proved that the access to & egress from the property through doors in a garden wall was rendered inconvenient & dangerous by the removal of the footway, & the county ct. judge granted a mandatory injunction to defts. to restore the footway to a width of 1 ft. less than before:—Held: the county ct. judge had rightly directed himself in law, & there was evidence upon which he was entitled to find that the action of defts. in removing the footway was unreasonable & arbitrary, & it was not sufficient for the action to be bond fide; & the order was properly made.—HOWARD

1191a. — Obstruction during construction of new road.—A corpn., in making a new road connecting two existing roads in the same straight line with a bridge across a ravine dividing them, pulled down an old wall which closed a cul de sac in which one of the roads terminated, partly constructed the new road & erected a wooden fence at the end, beyond which was the ravine. Pltf. drove his car after dark down a public road leading straight into the new road under construction, & not seeing the fence in time, which had no red lamp or other warning of danger upon it, & personal injury & damage to the car:—Held: the corpn. being in occupation of the land under construction as a new road, pltf.

was not a trespasser upon private property, but an invitee, to whom they owed a duty to warn of any hidden danger; the unlighted fence was in the circumstances a concealed trap, & pltf. not being guilty of contributory negligence, defts. were liable to him in damages for negligence.—*OLDHAM v. It was also established that defenders had not failed in their duty with respect either to the construction & condition of the lamp, or to the precautions taken to ensure that it should remain alight during the hours of darkness:—Held: the standard of performance could not be absolute, but must be relative to the best available means of achieving exact performance, & in the absence of evidence of any failure on the part of defenders to take every reasonable means of carrying out their statutory obligations, they fell to be absolved.—*KROGH v. The amount not having been paid, the council on Jan. 1, 1926, applied to a magistrate under sect. 116 (1) of the above Act of 1894 to fix the amount of the expenses & to make an order that no part of the structure should be let for occupation until after payment thereof. The magistrate dismissed the complaint on the ground that more than the period of six months limited by sect. 11 of the above Act of 1848 had elapsed between the time when the matter of the complaint arose & the date when the complaint was made :—Held : the six months' limitation of time applied to proceedings under sect. 116 (1) of the Act of 1894, & the time ran from the date of the demand, & the magistrate's decision must be affirmed.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. Upon the summons for directions pltfs. desired to amend the writ by adding after the word "owners" the words "at the time of the completion of the works referred to in the indorsement hereon," & they also asked for leave to effect substituted service on defts. so described by affixing copies of the writ on the respective premises :—Held : the writ, in not giving the names & addresses of defts. other than A., did not comply with the form of writ which had the basis of statutory authority & was prescribed by R. 2466a. — Powers of magistrate.—B. Corpn. proposed to execute certain private street works under Birmingham Corpn. (Consolidation) Act, 1883, ss. 16, 50, which were substantially identical with Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57). The corpn. duly complied with the formalities required & made a provisional apportionment on resps., the frontagers on the street, according to their respective frontages. Resps. objected that the works were unnecessary. On the hearing of this objection resps. called no evidence. The stipendiary magistrate held that some works were necessary, but was of opinion that the estimated expenses were too heavy. He reduced the estimate & ordered that one resp. should pay one-half & each other resp. two-thirds of the respective sums named in the provisional apportionment:—Held: inasmuch as the corpn. had not resolved that the apportionment should be on any basis other than frontage, the stipendiary magistrate could not direct an apportionment on any other basis. Subject to that limitation, he must consider & determine, upon evidence, whether the proposed works were in any, & what, respect unnecessary, & must have regard to any alternative proposals, if resps. made any & supported them by evidence, & to the cost thereof.—*BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. The area in which the bridge was situated was subsequently annexed to a burgh, & the burgh authorities called upon the co., as frontagers to a private street, to construct a paved footway along one side of the road:—Held: assuming that the co. were frontagers to a private street, Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1903 (c. 33), s. 16, had not, either 1226a. ——— If living at his death—Cash value of policy sought to be taken by insured during life.]—A husband took out an insurance policy for £500 on his life, & by the terms of the policy the co. agreed to pay that sum to insured's wife, if she were living at his death, or in the event of her prior death to pay it to insured's exors., administrators & assigns. The policy contained a proviso that, if at the end of twenty years insured was still living, he should have the right to exercise any of six specified options. Insured being then still living, he exercised an option to receive the entire cash value of the policy with its share of accumulated profits & to discontinue the policy. A sum of £288 thus became payable. 29751. During imprisonment—Manifest intention to desert.—A husband, who was married in July, 1916, lived with his wife for six weeks, & thereafter did not live with her again for over three years. In Nov. 1919, he met her accidentally & lived with her for a few days, & then he went abroad to take up an appointment. On the voyage out he wrote informing her that the appointment had been cancelled. Thereafter he never lived with his wife or communicated with her again. 5382a. — — —]—Although the considerations which applied in the Ecclesiastical Cts. to awards of alimony must have due weight in determining the proper award of maintenance to a wife after a decree of divorce, the assumption of a fixed arithmetical rule & an indispensable process of applying that rule is erroneous, & disregards the duty imposed on the ct. by Jud. (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 190 (1) & (2). Where the husband's whole income has been expended on the requirements of the matrimonial home, a third of his means may well be required for the wife's maintenance; but where, beyond everything called for by such requirements, the husband possesses an ample fortune, the amount of his income affords no definite guidance as to the sum required to supply his sometime wife with the necessaries, comforts, & advantages incidental to her station in life.

Where the husband's gross income was £25,337 a year, derived mainly from his interest in a business concern, the registrar by his report submitted that the husband should be ordered to secure to his wife, who had divorced him, by way of permanent maintenance for her life, the annual sum of £3,500 less tax, & to pay to his wife during their joint lives the further annual sum of £500 less tax. The ct. confirmed the report.—GILBEY v. GILBEY, [1927] P. 197; 96 L. J. P. 55; 137 L. T. 31; 43 T. L. R. 283.

(Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 191, to the jurisdiction to order a settlement of it, is prima facie the property of a woman in England & subject to English jurisdiction. That jurisdiction can be invoked against a person not domiciled in England, & in respect of property beyond the jurisdiction, only subject to the principle that English cts. will not infringe the authority of foreign tribunals in their domestic affairs, or adjudicate with regard to property when their judgment will be ineffective. Apart from jurisdiction over property, the exercise of jurisdiction in personam in such a case depends upon the question whether the party to be affected by it is within the reach of the compulsory process of the ct.

5791 I. Interests of children & parents.—A wife obtained a decree of divorce for adultery in an action which also contained a conclusion for the custody of the two pupil children of the marriage. The Lord Ordinary, regarding the question solely from the point of view of the children's welfare, awarded the custody to the father:—Held: (1) Guardianship of Infants Act, 1925 (c. 45), s. 1, recognised & proceeded upon the existence of rights & preferences in the spouses to the custody of their children, & its effect was not to abolish those rights & preferences, but to provide that they should not be enforced if the result would be adverse to the children's welfare; (2) the wife, as innocent spouse, had a primary claim to the custody of the children; (3) on the facts she was, from the point of view of the children's welfare, as suitable a guardian as the father.—*HUME v. An application was subsequently made by her to a ct. of summary jurisdiction in England under the above Act to confirm that order as against her husband who was resident in England. Upon that application no evidence was submitted to the justices on behalf of the husband. The justices confirmed the order with the modification or variation of substituting £2 10s. per week, i.e., £2 for the married woman & 10s. for the child, in lieu of £5 10s. per week, they being of opinion that they were bound to reduce the amount payable under the order to the limit prescribed for such orders made by a ct. of summary jurisdiction under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39).—Held: (1) the justices had power to state a case for the opinion of the K. B. The soil was of such a poor quality that resp. had to expend considerable sums yearly on feeding stuffs. The produce grown on the land represented only about thirty per cent. of the food required for the cows. Resp. sold his milk to regular customers in the district, & only purchased milk for resale when his own supply was insufficient for his customers' ordinary requirements. He sold his cows when they became dry. The general comrs. held that resp. was not a dealer in milk, & they discharged an assessment made upon him in accordance with 1918 Act, Schedule D., Case III., r. 4 :—Held : resp. was a dealer in milk whose land was insufficient for the keep of the cows within the rule, & the further question whether the assessable value afforded no just estimate of the profits was for the comrs. to find, & the case must be remitted to them for that purpose. *HUXHAM v. On Mar. 17, 1921, the £20,000 was paid to the co., & in anticipation of the marble being purchased in Italy, though not till the autumn of 1921, the co. at once arranged for the conversion of the greater part of the £20,000 into lire at one hundred & three to the £, & a lira account was opened. In May, 1921, the lira had appreciated in value, & as the money was not yet required by the co., their nominee, without the co.'s knowledge or authority, directed the sale of the balance of the lira account, & at seventy-two to the £ the lire realised a profit of £6,707, which was received by the co. The lire were subsequently repurchased for the purposes of the contract for £19,386, which was allowed as a deduction from the co.'s profits for income tax purposes : Held : in computing the co.'s profits for the purposes of assessment to income tax for the year 1922-23 the £6,707 was not a profit arising

In the books of the co. each shareholder was credited with his proportion of the bonus in payment of 10s in respect of each of the shares so allotted & issued to him :—Held : the proportion of the bonus so credited to each shareholder was “profits or bonus credited” to him within Income Tax Assessment Act, 1915-1921, s. 14 (b), & was properly included in his income.—JAMES v. The operation was successful & applt. joined other syndicates, composed partly of the same persons engaged in “turning over” three other mills. In each case a profit resulted to applt. On Mar. 21, 1923, the additional comrs. for the division in which applt. resided signed the book containing an estimated assessment upon applt. to income tax under Schedule D. for the year 1919-20. The book was not delivered to the general comrs. until Apr. 18, 1923; notice was given to applt. on May 5, 1923, & the assessment was signed by the general comrs. on Sept. 5, 1923:—Held: (1) though each adventure of “turning over” a mill, taken singly, was not a trade, but a capital transaction, yet the succession of such adventures, in each of which applt. took part, might constitute the carrying on of a trade, & the Special Comrs., on an appeal against the assessment, were not estopped by their previous decisions from reconsidering the whole of the facts, & finding that applt. was carrying on a trade, on the profits of which he was liable to income tax; (2) the assessment was made in time, having been made when it was signed by the additional comrs. within the three years allowed by 1918 Act, s. 125 (2), & the subsequent steps need not be within that time.—*PICKFORD v. He was in England on leave from June to Sept. 1918, & during that time the co., at his request, placed to the credit of his banking account in England £525, being an advance on account of salary falling due before Apr. 5, 1919, & an assessment to income tax was made upon him for the year 1918-19 in respect of this sum under Schedule D., Case V. His wife had been for several years, & was throughout the year 1918-19, the owner of a house in Kent, towards the upkeep of which he contributed out of other income arising in England, but since Sept. 1917, she had been mainly living with him in Demerara, the house being left unoccupied. stallions to replace any which might become incapacitated. All his stallions, of which only a small proportion earned fees, formed part of one undivided stud. He was assessed to income tax, on the profits of his general farming business under Schedule B. & on the profits of his fee-earning stallions under Schedule D. As a method of fixing the amount of profits assessable under the latter Schedule, the comrs. determined to regard a certain number of stallions as exclusively used in earning fees, & to allow the deduction of the cost of their full upkeep & attendance, & to provide for replacements by allowing a similar deduction in respect of other stallions in the stud to the extent of one-third of the number of travelling stallions. The farmer contended that his stallion-owning business should be treated as entirely separate from his farming business, & that the whole of the expenses & losses connected with his stallions should be set against the revenue derived from them:—Held: it was primarily a question for the comrs. to determine, & no cause had been shown for disturbing their determination.—*MARSHALL v. - 307a. Accident Insurance—Mutual society.—A mutual insurance asscn. was formed, its sole activity being the indemnity of its members, who were coal-owners, against liability for compensation in respect of fatal accidents to workmen. The members of the asscn. were the persons protected by it, every member being liable to contribute a sum not exceeding £25 in the event of a winding up. The asscn. formed a general fund by making calls upon members proportionate to the wages paid in their works for the time being, & the balance of the ordinary call fund was transferred to a reserve fund, into which any extraordinary calls were also paid. A member, on retirement, was entitled to get back in cash a proportion of his share in the above reserve fund, but, apart from this, members had no right at all to the cash in the reserve fund, though the interest accruing on the reserve fund could be used in diminution of members' calls:—Held: (1) the sums paid by the members to the asscn. were admissible deductions in computing the profits made by a member for the purpose of assessment to income tax, as the money was laid out by the respective members on a true insurance principle; (2) the surplus funds of the asscn. were not assessable to income tax, as the asscn. was mere machinery for the purpose of enabling subscribing members to insure themselves.—*THOMAS v. - 393a.—Under Housing of the Working Classes Acts & Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), resp., a metropolitan borough council, assigned to the London County Council all rates authorised to be raised by resp. under Metropolis Management Act, 1855, or London Govt. Act, 1890 (c. 14), to secure money advanced by the London County Council. The money so raised was used by resp. in connection with the construction of flats for the working classes in pursuance of a scheme prepared by them under Housing, Town Planning, etc., Act, 1919 (c. 35), s. 1. In making payments of interest on the sums advanced resp. deducted whether derived from a housing scheme or from elsewhere. Resps. had only one banking account, out of which all payments, including the interest, were made & into which all receipts, including the profits & gains derived from resps.' electricity undertaking, or otherwise, were paid. No special fund in respect of any housing scheme was maintained. Resps. possessed profits or gains brought into charge to income tax sufficient for the payment of interest on the sums advanced, apart from any revenue derived under any housing scheme:—Held: as none of resps.' profits & gains other than the receipts of the housing scheme contributed to the payment of the interest, & as resps. had an indemnity against loss on the scheme, resps. were liable to account for the amount of the deductions.—DICKSON v. HAMPESTEAD BOROUGH COUNCIL (1927), 91 J. P. 116; 13 T. L. R. 595; 25 L. G. R. 402.

394a. — — — — — The profits of the Metropolitan Water Board were assessable under 1918 Act, Schedule A., No. III., r. 3, by reference to the profits of the year preceding the year of assessment. The accounts of the Board for the year ending Mar. 31, 1922, showed a loss, no assessment was made for the year ending Apr. 5, 1923. The accounts for the year ending Mar. 31, 1923, showed a profit of over two millions, out of which the Board paid over one million interest on water stock, & debentures, deducting & retaining the income tax thereon. On an information claiming that the Board was liable to account for the amount of the tax so deducted, the Board contended that the interest paid for the year 1922–23 was payable out of profits brought into charge for 1922–23 within Rules applicable to all Schedules, r. 19, & was in fact paid out of the profits for 1922–23, & that, although the income tax for 1922–23 was to be measured by the profits of the preceding year, the profits for 1922–23 had been brought into charge, & rule 21 did not apply:—Held: as the Board had been assessed at zero under Schedule A for 1922–23, the interest had not been paid out of profits brought into charge, & the Crown was entitled to succeed.—A.-G. v. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD (1927), 43 T. L. R. 656.

Testator, a citizen of the United States left the residue of his property in trust for his daughter during her life. The trustees, who had full power over the investment of the trust fund, were a co. constituted under the law of the State of New York & resident therein. The trust fund consisted of foreign govt. securities, foreign stocks & shares, & other foreign property. The trustees paid over such of the sums they received as they considered to be income, after deducting expenses, to the order of the daughter at a bank in New York. No part of the income was remitted to the United Kingdom. Resp., the husband of testator's daughter & resident in the United Kingdom, was assessed under Schedule D., Case IV., in the full amount of the income of the trust:—Held: (1) the daughter was specifically entitled under the will in equity during her life to the interest & dividends of the securities, stocks, & shares comprised in the trust fund, & her husband was assessable under Case IV., r. 1, & Case V., r. 1, to income tax in respect thereof, except such, if any, as were shown to be "foreign possessions other than stocks, shares & rents," whether such interest & dividends were remitted to the United Kingdom or not; (2) the matter should be remitted to the comrs. to state which of the items of the trust fund were (a) "securities" within Case IV., r. 1, (b) "stocks, shares or rents" within Case V., r. 1, & (c) "possessions out of the United Kingdom other than stocks, shares or rents" within Case V., r. 2. *BAKER v. PART V. SECT. 9.

470 i. Exemption of charities.—Charitable purposes.—By the law of Scotland a trust for “charitable or benevolent” purposes is a trust for “charitable” purposes alone, & is a trust for “charitable purposes only” within 1918 Act.—JACKSON'S TRUSTEES v. INLAND REVENUE, [1926] S. C. 579; 10 Tax Cas. 460.—SCOT.

470 iii. ——— Supplying nurses.—An assocn. was formed for the purpose of improving & extending nursing facilities in a county. The members were divided into three classes according to income, the largest class consisting of persons in comparatively poor circumstances. An annual membership fee was charged, varying, according to the class, from 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per annum. The fees charged for the services of a nurse, or for admission to the assocn.'s hospital, varied from sums which, in the case of the poorest class, were considerably below the cost of the services rendered, to sums which, in the case of the wealthiest class, were reasonably equivalent to such cost. Nursing facilities when not required for members, were granted to non-members at increased rates. Funds were held by the assocn. which had been raised by public subscription, & the hospital had been acquired with funds similarly raised. In respect of special charitable donations, necessitous cases from certain parishes received the services of a nurse gratuitously:—Held: the assocn. was established for “charitable purposes only.”—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. PEEBLES SHIRE NURSING ASSOCN., [1927] S. C. 215; 11 Tax Cas. 335.—SCOT.

470 iv. ——— Promotion of temperance.—Testator expressed his desire that the leading of a sober life might be made more easy for the inhabitants of F., & with that object conveyed half of the residue of his estate to trustees for the purpose of providing F. with a temperance public-house. His trustees spent part of the funds in establishing a temperance hotel, containing a middle-class cafe & a cheap working-class cafe, free reading & recreation rooms, & bedrooms, & a lecture-hall, which could be hired at moderate figures. Their policy was to make the hotel pay its way without earning profits, & the balance of the trust funds was invested & the interest was used to make good an annual deficit on the working of the hotel:—Held: the interest formed part of the income of a trust established for “charitable purposes only,” & was “applied to charitable purposes only.”—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. FALKIRK TEMPERANCE CAFE TRUST, [1927] S. C. 261; 11 Tax Cas. 353.—SCOT.

472b. ——— Temperance reform.—A society whose main object was “united action to secure legislative & other temperance reform”:—Held: not a body of persons established for charitable purposes only, & its income, inasmuch as it was not applied to charitable purposes only, was not entitled to exemption from income tax.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. TEMPERANCE COUNCIL OF CHRISTIAN CHURCHES OF ENGLAND & WALES (1926), 136 L. T. 27; 42 T. L. R. 618; 10 Tax Cas. 748.

472c. ——— Seaside boarding-house with reduced charges.—By a declaration of trust “a home or place of residence” was founded & endowed, “where persons requiring temporary rest & change of air for the benefit of their health may obtain same.” About half the income of the home came from payments by visitors, who included convalescents, persons needing rest & change, & holiday applicants:—Held: since on the construction of the trust deed there was throughout an overriding charity which fulfilled the character of a charitable convalescent home, 473. Exemption of person not ordinarily resident in United Kingdom.—Holder of securities issued free of tax.—Appttd., the holder of certain securities to which 1918 Act, s. 46 (1), applied, claimed exemption from income tax on the ground that she was not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom. Appttd. had been in the habit of going abroad for the greater part of the year, spending only the summer in the United Kingdom where she had a house in Glasgow. In 1916 she gave up her house & sold her furniture, & thereafter she lived in hotels. Some of her personal belongings were stored in London where she also kept a bank account, & she had an address at a bank in Glasgow to which letters could be sent. During the two financial years to which the claim for exemption related she spent about eight & a half months in each year in hotels abroad, & the remaining three & a half months in an hotel in London:—Held: the whole circumstances must be considered, & the Special Comrs. were entitled to find that appttd. was ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom during the years in question & to refuse the claim for exemption.—REID v. INLAND REVENUE, [1926] S. C. 589.—SCOT.

472d. ——— Agricultural society.—An agricultural society, founded mainly for the purpose of holding an annual agricultural show, had also among their objects the improvement of live stock & poultry & of machinery & appliances used in agriculture, & agricultural education & scientific research, & they claimed exemption from income tax upon the dividends from their investments, on the ground that they were a society established for charitable purposes only:—Held: there was evidence on which the Special Comrs. could find that the society was established for charitable purposes only.—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. 483a. ——— ———.]—Testator devised his residuary estate on trust for applts., who were a society established for charitable purposes only & were entitled to exemption from income tax on their income from investments. Pending completion of the administration the exors. paid to the trustees for applt. society certain sums on account of income. Applts. claimed repayment of income tax, but the Inland Revenue Comrs. refused repayment so far as related to income received by the exors. before the date when the residue was ascertained:—Held: as the income when it was received was the income only of the exors. & the money paid to the charity was only a sum equal to the income payable to the charity as a matter of equitable book-keeping in due course of administration, applts. were not entitled to the repayment claimed.—MARIE CELESTE SAMARITAN SOCIETY OF LONDON HOSPITAL v. To meet these instalments it was necessary to sell part of the lands, testator's movable estate being insufficient to pay the duties. All the ordinary shares were held by one of the directors. The debentures, all of which were issued to this shareholder, were redeemable at one month's notice by the co. at any time, & at one month's notice by the holder after May 25, 1920. On Apr. 16, 1920, the whole of the £150,000 due on the debentures was paid by the co. to the holder, interest being waived by him, & the co. thereupon borrowed £72,500 from him at 6 per cent. interest, a liability reduced to £33,117 by June 30, 1920:—Held: the debentures constituted a capital receipt in the hands of the shareholder, & he was not assessable to super tax for the year 1920-21 in respect of the amount of the debentures.—WHITMORE v. Distribution of profits—Assets of company written up—Loans to directors written off.—A partnership business was converted into a limited co. in 1916, practically the whole of the shares therein being held by two resps., the original partners, who were brothers, & were also the governing directors. The accounts showed profits of £117,000 for the three years ending Dec. 1919, but no dividends were declared or paid. The co., having power to lend money, granted loans amounting to £283,000 to resps. at 5 per cent. interest, against which the capital assets were increased in value by £226,000 & profits drawn upon to the extent of £57,000. The actual cash lent was mainly provided by a bank overdraft. At a later date resps. duly passed resolutions purporting to cancel the debt of £283,000 by writing it off against the general reserve fund. Resps. having been assessed to super tax upon £283,000:—Held: (1) the loans were genuine loans, which gave rise to no liability to super tax, even if cancelled, except as to the £57,000 taken from profit & loss account; (2) the purported release of the debt was wholly invalid & ineffectual, & resps. remained liable to the co. to repay the whole amount of the £283,000 but were not liable for any super tax thereon.—HALL v. 671a. Loans to controlling shareholder of private company—No dividends declared.—Appld. was the controlling shareholder of five private limited cos. From time to time he withdrew from the business of each of the cos. sums which he used to finance the purchase in his own name of premises to be occupied by himself trading as a firm. The sums so withdrawn were described in the cos.' accounts as "loans" to applt. trading as such firm. Each of the cos. had power to advance money on loan, with or without security, but, while in some cases the loans shown in the accounts to have been made to applt. were subsequently approved formally in general meeting, no previous formal authorisation was given for any of the loans. The loans were not secured by any document, & no provision was made as to repayment or interest thereon. None of the cos. ever declared a dividend for any of the years material to the case. The Special Comrs. decided that the loans in question had not been made in the course of the businesses carried on by the cos., & that they were not genuine loans but constituted income of applt. for the purposes of super tax: Held: there was ample evidence before the Comrs. to support their conclusion of fact. The sum of £683 was paid before the execution of the lease. The circumstances in which the rent was fixed at £35 per annum were not set out in the lease, which was for a term of seven years, shortly afterwards extended for another year in consideration of resp. contributing £141 towards further repairs, but it was agreed therein that the rent under any new lease should be £140 per annum.—Held: the sums paid by resp. for repairs at the beginning of his tenancy were capital expenditure, & the difference between the net Schedule A. assessment on the house & the rent of £35 actually paid under the lease formed part of his total income for super tax purposes. *INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. - 18a. Type calculated to elude observation—Insurers refused benefit of clause.—Deft. co. insured a quantity of leather, consigned c.i.f., for a voyage from New York to Tunis, by a certificate of insurance which provided: "This certificate represents & takes the place of the policy & conveys all the rights of the original policy-holder as fully as if the property were covered by a special policy direct to the holder of this certificate." One of the conditions of the policy was in much smaller print than other parts of the policy & was as follows: "In case of loss or damage to the property hereby insured the loss shall be reported to the representatives of the co., or, if there be no representative of the co., to Lloyd's agent, as soon as the goods are landed or the loss is known or expected." On the day after the arrival of the goods at Tunis the consignee sold them to pltf., who found them to have been damaged by salt water.

In an action by pltf. on the certificate of insurance deft. co. contended, (1) that pltf. was not the right person to sue, & (2) that the clause in the policy as to giving notice within a limited time had not been complied with:—Held: the certificate, having been issued by deft. co. itself, enured to the benefit of pltf., & since pltf. did not know of the condition as to notice, & since the clause as to notice was in such small print that it was not such as a reasonable man, reading with reasonable care, would regard as forming part of the contractual terms, pltf. was entitled to recover.—*KOSKAS v. - 720a. ————]—Pltfs. insured a consignment of gunpowder on a voyage & reinsured with defts. Both the original policy & the reinsurance policies covered perils of the sea & jettison, & were expressed to be "warranted free from loss arising from . . . destruction . . . in a port of distress or otherwise." The original policy contained no admission of seaworthiness, but the reinsurance policies did contain such an admission, & they provided that defts. would "pay as paid thereon," & that the payment should be subject to the same terms as in the original policy. The vessel carried, in addition to the gunpowder, drums of sulphuric acid, & owing to heavy weather some of the drums burst & the acid disabled the machinery, with the result that the ship had to put in to a port of distress. There the required repairs could not be carried out with the gunpowder on board, & it was thrown overboard & became a total loss. Pltfs. paid the owners as for a total loss, & claimed to be reimbursed by defts.:—Held: as the way in which the sulphuric acid was stowed & loaded affected the safety of the ship & rendered her unseaworthy, pltfs. were under no liability on the original policy, & they could not recover from defts. on the reinsurance policies.—FIREMAN'S FUND INSURANCE CO. v. The ship stranded before she reached Gibraltar, the oranges were damaged, & pltfs. had to pay on the policy. In an action on the contract of reinsurance:—Held: on the true reading of the slip, the intention was to limit the risk to the voyage from Gibraltar, & the action failed.—EAGLE, STAR & BRITISH DOMINIONS INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. - 2010a. Recovery of damages in collision action.—Defts. insured pltf's. steamer against the usual marine risks, the steamer being valued in the policy at £1,000. During the currency of the policy the steamer collided with another steamer. The ship was repaired at pltf's. cost, & a collision action by pltf's. against the owners of the other steamer was settled, & the owners of the other steamer paid over to pltf's. £2,500, as being half the damages. In an action against defts. pltf's. contended that, as the balance of their loss was £2,500 they were entitled to recover that amount, it being less than the value of £4,000 put on the steamer in the policy:—Held: defts. were liable only for £1,500, being the difference between £4,000 & £2,500, the amount recovered by pltf's. from the owners of the other ship.—GOOLE & HULL STEAM TOWING CO., LTD. v. OCEAN MARINE INSURANCE CO., LTD. (1927), 44 T. L. R. 133.
- 2014a. Loss less than amount paid into court.—Resps. insured applt's. tug boat by a policy of marine insurance, which provided that, on a claim for a constructive total loss, the insured value was to be taken as the repaired value, & that nothing was to be taken into account for the damaged value, & also that all claims were to be subject to English law & usage. The tug was sunk by collision, & applt's. at once gave notice of abandonment. Salvors employed by resps. raised the tug in a few days, & the abandonment was not accepted. The salvors, without the knowledge of applt's., made an offer to resps. for the tug, & resps. requested them to put it into writing, which they did. The appellate ct., considering the evidence as to the probable cost of repair, held that there had been only a partial loss to an amount less than that paid into ct.:—Held: (1) the sinking was not an actual total loss; (2) resps. were not precluded from denying that they had accepted the abandonment; (3) there had been no constructive total loss within Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (c. 41), s. 60 (2) (i), since even at the date of the abandonment it was not unlikely that the tug could be recovered, & it was unnecessary to consider whether the old rule, that the crucial moment was the commencement of the action, had been modified by sects. 61 & 62; (4) the appellate ct. was not bound to accept the highest estimate of the cost of repairs given by resps.' witnesses, & the ct.'s finding as to the sum necessary, being justified by the evidence & not being based upon any error of principle, could not be questioned. CAPTAIN J. A died from heart failure on Mar. 24. —Held: (1) non-disclosure of any material circumstances arising at any moment between the proposal & the completion of the contract avoided the contract; (2) the consultation on Mar. 9 & the operation were material facts, which A. ought to have communicated to the co.—*WALL v. basis of the contract of assurance." On July 15 defts. replied stating "The proposal made by you . . . has this day been accepted, & if the health of the life proposed remains meanwhile unaffected, the policy will be issued on payment of the first premium. . . . The risk of the co. will not commence until receipt of the first premium, & the directors meanwhile reserve the power to alter or withdraw this acceptance." On July 21 L. began to feel ill, & on the next day a friend filled in a cheque for the first premium, which L. signed in bed. The cheque was not sent off till the evening of July 24, by which time L. was seriously ill with pneumonia. On July 26 defts. received the cheque, & thereupon they sent to L. a certificate of that date stating that the proposal had been accepted, & that upon the payment of the first quarterly premium a policy would be issued in due course. On July 27 L. died. His administrators sued defts. for the sum insured:—Held: (1) the acceptance of the proposal by defts. was made in reliance upon the continued truth of the representations therein, & as the risk had been materially increased between proposal & acceptance, a condition which defts. had made a condition going to the root of the contract had not been fulfilled; (2) since contracts of insurance were contracts uberrimæ fidei, there was a duty of disclosure on the part of the assured to inform defts. of his change of health, which was a material change in the risk insured, & the position was here even stronger because defts. had inserted express terms in their documents to protect themselves.—*LOOKER v. 3214a. ———.]—A policy of insurance provided that the insurance co. would indemnify the assured against all sums which he might be legally liable to pay for damages or compensation to any person for accidental bodily injury or accidental damage to property, where such injury or damage was caused by the driving of the insured's motor car, including law costs when incurred with the consent of the co. While the insured was driving his motor car a collision took place between it & a motor cycle, the result being that the driver of the latter vehicle was injured, a passenger thereon was killed, & both vehicles were damaged. At the time of the collision the insured was drunk through his own unpremeditated folly. The insured was convicted of the manslaughter of the deceased passenger. The injured driver brought an action for personal injuries against the insured, in which he was awarded damages & costs, & the insured incurred costs. The insured also incurred costs in repairing the vehicles, in attending an inquest on deceased, & in defending himself in the police ct. proceedings before his trial. In an action by the insured against the co. for indemnity against these damages & costs: Held: (1) the policy covered liabilities of the insured for accidental bodily injury to any person or accidental damage to property caused by his negligence, even though gross & attended by criminal consequences; (2) the policy, by covering these liabilities, was not void as against public policy, & the insured was entitled to the indemnity which he claimed.—*JAMES v. The extension of the indemnity to friends or relatives of the insured is conditional upon such friend or relative being a licensed & competent driver & not being insured under any other policy. Condition 10. If at the happening of any accident, injury, damage, or loss covered by this policy there shall be subsisting any other insurance or indemnity of any nature whatever covering same, whether effected by insured or by any other person, then the co. shall not be liable to pay or contribute towards any such damage or loss more than a ratable proportion of any sum payable in respect thereof for compensation." L., G.'s brother-in-law, took out with the G. co. a similar policy, providing that "insured will also be indemnified hereunder while personally driving a car not belonging to him provided that there is no other insurance in respect of such other car whereby insured may be indemnified," & that "if at the time of the occurrence of any accident, loss or damage there shall be any other indemnity or insurance subsisting whether effected by insured or by any other person the corp'n. shall not be liable to pay or contribute more than a ratable proportion of any sums payable in respect of such accident loss or damage." While L. was driving G.'s car with G.'s consent it had a collision, & L. had to pay damages. G., as trustee for L., claimed against the M. co., & L. on his own behalf claimed against the G. co.:—Held: in each policy the provision as to ratable contribution qualified the preceding clause, & each co. was liable to pay claimants half the amount claimed.—*GALE v. g i. Misstatements in proposal
What amount to. A motor vehicle in the possession of the purchaser under a hire-purchase agreement was destroyed by fire. An action was brought by the two parties to the hire-purchase agreement under a policy issued in the names of both parties. Defts. pleaded that all benefit under the policy had been forfeited through misstatements in the proposal. The proposal began "I we, the undersigned desire to insure my/our motor vehicle." After the words "owner's full name," was written the names of both pltt. "for their respective rights & interests." The question "Have you ever made a claim against any insurance co." was answered "No." The proposal was signed by only one pltt. Although pltt. who signed the proposal had never made a claim, the other had done so:—Held: a nonsuit, on the ground that the evidence

g ii. — — — A proposal for the insurance of a motor car contained the question, "Has any proposal for insurance, or any policy ever been withdrawn, declined or cancelled?" Pltt's answer was "No." Pltt. had held a policy over the car with another co., but by arrangement, & to oblige pltt., this policy had been terminated:—Held: the word "cancelled" meant the determination of the policy by the unilateral act of the co., & the termination of the policy by mutual arrangement did not amount to a cancellation, & the answer to the question in the proposal was true.—*WILLCOCKS v. - 141a. — Pending hearing of summons against applicant.—Appls., the licensee & the owners of a public-house, applied to the licensing justices on Mar. 1 for a renewal of the licence, which was due to expire on Apr. 4. The justices, on the ground that summonses were pending against the licensee for supplying during non-permitted hours intoxicating liquor for consumption on the premises, adjourned the consideration of the application to the next transfer sessions to be held on Apr. 12. On Mar. 4 the licensee was convicted on the summonses, & on Apr. 12 the licensing justices refused the renewal:—Held: the adjournment did not amount to a refusal of the renewal.—THOMAS v. NEWINGTON LICENSING JJ. (1926), 136 L. T. 638; 43 T. L. R. 181; sub nom. THOMAS v. NEWINGTON LICENSING JJ., MEUX'S BREWERY CO., LTD. v. NEWINGTON LICENSING JJ., 91 J. P. 37; 25 L. G. R. 109.

- 202a. Applicant's willingness to contribute to compensation fund.—A question arose which of two adjacent licensed houses should be granted a renewal of its licence, & which should be suppressed. The owners of each house submitted to the licensing justices plans of proposed alterations, & the owners of one of the houses offered to pay £1,250 to the compensation fund if the alterations were sanctioned. The same licensing justices sat as compensation authority to consider the question of redundancy, & decided to renew the licence of the house whose owners had offered the contribution, it appearing from the evidence that that house, when altered, could be made the better of the two. They then, as licensing justices, approved the alterations to that house:—Held: (1) in considering the question of the contribution offered to the compensation fund the licensing justices had taken extraneous matter into account, & as this must necessarily have affected their minds as compensation authority, their decision must be quashed; (2) it was contrary to the spirit of the Licensing Acts, though it might be within the letter of them, that the powers of the compensation authority should be delegated to the licensing committee so that the two bodies were identical, it being clearly intended that they should be separate & independent bodies.—*R. v. Part VII.—Compensation.

381. For the existing paragraph substitute the following paragraph :—

———— Instructing solicitor to oppose.—On an application to the licensing justices of a county borough for the renewal of an old on-licence the justices referred the matter to the compensation authority of the borough under Licensing (Consolidation) Act, 1910 (c. 24), s. 19, & at a further meeting they resolved that a solr. should be instructed to appear before the compensation authority & oppose the renewal on their behalf. The solr. duly appeared & opposed, & the compensation authority refused the renewal, subject to payment of compensation. Three of the justices who sat & voted as members of the compensation authority had been parties to the resolution of the licensing justices authorising a solicitor to appear on their behalf :—Held : the three justices were disqualified from sitting on the compensation tribunal on the ground of bias, & the decision of the tribunal must be set aside.—PROME UNITED BREWERIES CO. v. - 396a. — Letter purporting to enclose engrossment—& engrossment.—A prospective lessee having orally agreed to take a lease from a prospective lessor, a draft lease embodying the terms was approved by their respective solrs. By arrangement the engrossments of the lease & counterpart were then prepared by the lessee's solrs., who subsequently wrote to the lessor's solr. purporting to enclose the engrossment of the lease for his signature, & saying they had written to the lessee & expected to exchange parts shortly. By mistake the engrossment of the counterpart was enclosed to the lessor's solr., & the engrossment of the lease to the lessee, who subsequently delivered it to the lessor's solr.'s messenger in exchange for the engrossment of the counterpart. Shortly after this the lessee, relying (inter alia) on Stat. Frauds, repudiated the oral contract: Held: the lessee's solrs.' letter purporting to enclose the engrossment of the lease coupled with that engrossment, subsequently handed over by the lessee in person, constituted a sufficient memorandum of the oral contract. *HORNER v. Part VII.—Premises Included in the Demise.

1810a. — Liberty of passage for pipes—Extent of right.—Deft. co. were the lessees from a firm of architects for a determinable term of twenty-one years from June 24, 1923, & also occupiers of the first floor of a block of buildings known as I. Court under a lease which contained a reservation "excepting & reserving unto the lessors & the person or persons for the time being occupying the other parts of the building the passage of gas water & other pipes & electric wires through the demised premises & the free running of water & soil in & through the pipes connected with the demised premises." In May, 1924, pltf. took a lease of the second floor of I. Court from the firm, subject to a similar reservation. In exercise of the right reserved to the lessors & persons occupying other parts of the premises pltf. conducted pipes from her premises through deft. co.'s part of the premises. Deft. co., after the operations had proceeded for some time, alleged that great inconvenience would be caused to them, & cut the pipes :—Held : the reservation gave no right to the lessors or pltf. to introduce any new pipes or wires into the premises.—*TAYLOR v. Common court—Repair—Extent of obligation.—The wife of the tenant of a house in a tenement brought an action against the proprietors for damages in respect of injuries, which she alleged she had sustained in consequence of a fall caused by her foot catching in a depression in the pavement of a common court at the back of the tenement. Pursuer averred that the depression had been there, & the condition of the pavement had been defective & dangerous, for some years, & that the defective state of the pavement was open & obvious. She did not aver that she was unaware of the defect, or that she had ever complained of it to defenders, nor did she deny defenders' averment that she had lived in the tenement for years:—

- 3160a. — — — The tenant of an industrial dwelling-house, which, as regards rent, came within Housing Act, 1925 (c. 14), & Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17), & the rent of which had been increased under the latter Act, sought to recover from his landlords, deft. corp., his medical expenses & damages for loss of work incurred by reason of an accident suffered by him when, in opening one of the windows of the house, as soon as he had unlatched the top sash it fell owing to the breaking of the sash cord & severely crushed his hands. He based his claim on the alleged failure of the landlords to perform their statutory obligations under Housing Act, 1925, to keep the house "in all respects reasonably fit for human habitation" & alternatively, under Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, to keep the house in "good & tenantable repair" :—Held : (1) whatever was the effect of the above mentioned Acts upon a landlord's responsibility for the condition or state of repair of houses coming within the scope of those Acts, upon which, as applied to the facts, the ct. was not unanimous, it was a condition precedent to the liability of the landlord that notice of latent, as well as of patent, defects should be given to him by the tenant, whether or not the landlord had a right of access to inspect the state of repair of the house, & the absence of such notice was fatal to plff.'s claim. Defender retained the rent, & also counterclaimed for the damage suffered by her :—Held : a landlord's claim for rent was liquid only if he had fulfilled his obligations under the mutual contract of lease, & defender was entitled to retain her rent, & also to counterclaim for the damage she alleged she had suffered.—FINGLAND & MITCHELL v. HOWIE, [1926] S. C. 319.—SCOT.

Included in the pleasure grounds were ornamental waters consisting of two ponds & three lakes, which afforded boating & trout fishing. Plff. complained of various breaches of the above covenant, particularly in respect of the accumulation of mud in the lodge lake & in a portion of the upper boat lake, thereby causing deterioration in the trout fishing, & required the lakes to be Part XX.—Insurance and Damage by Fire.

5069a. In named office "or in some other responsible insurance office to be approved by the lessor"—Duty of lessor.—A covenant by a lessee to insure the demised premises in the joint names of the lessee & the lessor in a named insurance office, "or in some other responsible insurance office to be approved by the lessor," confers upon the lessee an alternative to be exercised at his volition; & the lessor, upon an office being submitted to him, provided that it is a responsible one, must come to a reasonable decision from the point of view of the question whether the office is suitable for meeting loss by fire, & he must not be influenced by external & extraneous considerations, such as convenience of estate management.—TREDEGAR v. HARWOOD (1927), 44 T. L. R. 17; 71 Sol. Jo. 864, C. A.

5070a. Not to do anything to impose heavier insurance burden on premises—Obligation of lessor as to adjacent premises.—Lessees of factory premises for a term of twenty-one years covenanted to pay as additional rent such sums as the lessors might expend in effecting or maintaining the insurance of the demised premises against fire, & not to do or suffer anything on the demised premises which would render payable an increased or extra premium for the insurance of the demised premises or other premises adjacent thereto. The lessors covenanted to keep the demised premises insured against fire & that the lessees should have quiet enjoyment of them. Subsequently, the lessors let premises adjacent to the demised premises to another lessee, whose trade as a wood-worker rendered it impossible for the insurance of the demised premises to be effected except at considerably increased premiums:—Held: (1) the lessors, by dealing with the adjoining premises in a way which was not unreasonable or unbusinesslike, which did not affect the originally demised premises physically & which had rendered it, not less easy or legal, but substantially more expensive to conduct on them the business for which they had been demised, had not so interfered with the purpose for which those premises had been demised as to have derogated from their own grant of them; (2) the covenant by the lessees not to do or suffer anything on the originally demised premises which would render payable an increased or extra premium for the insurance of those, or adjacent, premises did not impliedly put the lessors under a similar obligation with regard to their user of adjacent premises.—*O'CEDAR, LTD. v. 6636a. Substitution of licence or tenancy at will under purchase agreement Rescission of agreement. By an agreement in writing dated Aug. 28, 1926, deft., the weekly tenant of a house to which Rent Restriction Acts applied, agreed to buy it from plff., the landlord, for £900. The agreement provided that deft. acknowledged owing plff. £63 10s. arrears of rent, & that plff. would accept £50 in settlement; that, until certain mtges. had been transferred from plff. to deft., plff. should remain in absolute ownership of the premises; & that, until completion of the conveyance, deft., who was to remain in possession, should pay to plff. interest on the £950 at the rate of 6 per cent. with interest on interest dating from Sept. 1, 1926. Deft. also agreed to pay certain deposits, plff., on failure of such payments, to be entitled to rescind the agreement & enter into possession of the house. Deft. agreed to maintain the house in a good state of repair & to pay rates, taxes, & insurance. On Feb. 27, 1927, plff. rescinded the agreement under the powers reserved in it, but deft. refused to give him possession of the house:—Held: (1) the effect of the agreement, as indicating the intention of the parties, was to determine the weekly tenancy, & to substitute for it either a licence or a tenancy at will, which, in its turn, was revoked or determined by the rescission of the purchase agreement, & deft. had no contractual right to resist the claim for possession; (2) deft. was not protected by Rent Restriction Acts, because after Aug. 28, 1926, deft. remained in possession of the house by virtue of the contract of purchase, & not as a statutory tenant, & under that contract she was either a licensee or a tenant at will, & after its rescission, if she had been a licensee, she was not a tenant who had held over under the Acts, & if she had been a tenant at will, her tenancy had been at no rent, & by Increase of Rent & Mtge. Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (c. 17), s. 12 (7), it must be ignored, with the result that the house was to be treated as untenanted & plff. had an unrestricted right to recover possession of it; (3) the rescission of the purchase agreement did not deprive plff. of his right to the arrears of rent which had accrued due to him before the agreement was made, but it did destroy deft.'s right to enforce the agreement with plff. to accept a less sum than that which was in fact owing.—TURNER v. WATTS (1927), 44 T. L. R. 105, D. C.

6674a. —. In 1910, deft., a county police constable, became quarterly tenant of a house. In 1912 the county police authority, which had till then made a grant in aid of the rent of houses occupied by police constables, decided that for the future the chief constable should be the tenant of those houses, that the constables should occupy them as servants, that the chief constable should pay all rent, rates & taxes, & that a deduction should be made in respect thereof from the men's pay. Deft. knew of, & made no demur to, this arrangement, but no express notice to determine his tenancy was given. From 1912 onwards the demands for rent were sent to deft., addressed to the county authority. These deft. took to the police office, received the full amount due, & paid it at the estate office of the landlord, being given a receipt acknowledging payment by the county authority, which receipt he sent to the county treasurer. No demands for rates & taxes were made to deft. This course of business continued for fourteen years, deft. continuing to occupy the house & his name remaining on the estate books as tenant. There was no written surrender or assignment of the tenancy:—Held: (1) there was evidence from which the inferences of fact could be drawn that in 1912 deft. agreed with the landlord that he would forthwith surrender his tenancy, that the landlord agreed with deft. to accept the surrender & accept the chief constable as his tenant, & that the deft. would in future occupy the house as a servant of the chief constable & not as a tenant, & on those facts there had been a surrender of the tenancy by operation of law; (2) deft. was in the circumstances estopped from denying that he had surrendered or assigned the tenancy.—METCALFE v. BOYCE, [1927] 1 K. B. 758; 96 L. J. K. B. 376; 136 L. T. 606; 91 J. P. 55; 43 T. L. R. 149, D. C.

6916 i. Grounds for interference by court.—Where, following a dispute, a settlement was made, by which the tenant was to quit the premises, & the tenant vacated accordingly.—Held: the tenant's claim for damages for eviction & to set aside the agreement for settlement should be dismissed, as the tenant was not at such a disadvantage with the landlord as to call for the intervention of the ct. for his protection, & he must stand by the bargain he made.—*McKAY v. tenancy at Martinmas 1923, the landlord let to the sub-tenant the house, garden, & offices, with the steading & farmyard, at a rent of £31. The rateable value of the garden, offices, steading, & farmyard was more than one-quarter of that of the house. Held: as the value of the land & other premises let with the house since Martinmas 1923 exceeded one-quarter of that of the house, 1920 Act did not apply to the subjects, the addition of the farmyard & steading having altered the identity of the house, & thus elided sect. 12 (6) of the Act. *HALDANE v. The rent being in arrear, pltf. served notice to quit on def., & instituted ejectment proceedings.—Held: (2) the letting was a new letting of portion of altered premises, so as to entitle pltf. to charge a rent without regard to the standard rent of the whole house; (3) def.'s claim for apportionment of the rent must be dismissed; (4) pltf. was entitled to an order for possession, the ct. granting a stay for a limited period, the order for possession not to issue if the rent was paid within that period. *BOYLE v. As the item of occupier's rates was subsequently found to have been overestimated, the original notice was amended by a corrective notice, sent by the landlord's factors & received by the tenant before any increased rent had become due.—Held: amendment of a defective notice was not restricted to the method prescribed by 1923 Act, s. 6, the primary purpose of which was to validate defective notices which had been acted on, & it was competent to amend the

He afterwards claimed to recover possession from def., on the ground that 1923 Act, s. 2 (1), applied so as to decontrol the premises.—Held: the possession by pltf. of the whole house at the passing of 1923 Act & up to the time of the letting to def. (1) was not possession of the "dwelling-house" in question, (2) nor was it possession by him in the capacity of "landlord," & sect. 2 (1) did not apply so as to decontrol the premises.—*COHEN v. the question of decontrol arose, & should be construed as "where part of a dwelling-house is or during the currency of this Act shall be lawfully sublet," & D.'s rooms were saved from decontrol by the proviso.—DOULIN v. PARCELL (1926), 136 L. T. 633; 43 T. L. R. 140; 25 L. G. R. 71, D. C.

Defts., in their plea of justification, did not justify the allegation of murder nor the allegation that pltf. was a murderer. But they said: "If & in so far as the words complained of meant or were understood to mean or were capable of meaning that pltf. took no steps to bring to justice persons guilty of the death of L. or of the attack on the British troops at Queenstown, or that pltf. was unfit to hold any office of trust or responsibility, or of any kind, or that pltf. was a person with whom no honest or responsible man ought to have anything to do, such words were & are true in substance & in fact." Pltf. having obtained an order for particulars of the justification, defts. delivered particulars of seventy-two murders committed in Ireland over a period of five years with an allegation that pltf. had assisted to organise them or had employed people to organise them: Held: notwithstanding that defts., in their plea of justification had avoided justifying the allegations of murder, the particulars delivered by defts. were admissible.—MAC GRATH v.  Where an action for defamation is tried by a judge with a jury, & plff. recovers nominal damages only, the judge, in deciding whether there is "good cause" for depriving plff. of costs, should take into consideration all the circumstances of the case, both before & after the issue of the writ. The smallness of the damages is only one element for consideration. The judge must exercise a discretion

Up to May 1, 1925, the cabs, with the consent of pltfs., had been garaged at defts.' garage, & B. owed defts. the balance of a general account for garage rent, goods supplied, & washing, cleaning, & repairing the cabs. Defts. had never been aware of the terms of the agreements between B. & pltfs. On May 1, 1925, pltfs. terminated the agreements, as B. was in arrear with his payments, but defts. refused to hand them the cabs, asserting that they had a lien for repairs. In an action for the delivery up of the cabs & damages for their detention :—Held : the lien might attach notwithstanding the provision that B. should not have authority to create a lien, & although defts. did not have continuous possession of the cabs, yet since, in letting B. take them out to ply for hire, they parted with possession without any intention to abandon the right of lien, the action failed. — *ALBEMARLE SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. - 139a. Arbitration condition precedent. The Crown requisitioned appets.’ ship under a charterparty, which provided that any dispute under the charter should be referred to arbn. under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), & which concluded as follows: “& it is further mutually agreed that such arbn. shall be a condition precedent to the commencement of any action at law.” In July, 1917, the ship was lost, but appets. did not proceed to arbn. until Dec. 1923. The Crown contended that, as the arbn. was not commenced within six years of the loss, the claim was barred by Stat. Limitations, 1623 (c. 16):—Held: under the arbn. clause no cause of action arose until the award was made, & time did not run until the making of the award, & the claim was not barred.—*BOARD OF TRADE v. made on Jan. 30, 1907. In Mar. 1907, the husband of the mtgee. accepted, on behalf of the mtgee., a further payment on account of interest. Since that payment no further payment of interest was made. On a summons for foreclosure issued in 1926 by the mtgee.: Held: (1) the right to com- mence proceedings first accrued, at the latest, at the date fixed for the redemption of the mtgee., which was a date earlier than that on which the mtgee. became of unsound mind; (2) the foreclosure proceedings must be dismissed, inasmuch as, in view of the express words of Real Property Limitation Act, 1837 (c. 28), a disability beginning after the date when the right to bring the action first accrued, or must be deemed to have first accrued, would not entitle the mtgee. to the protection given by Real Property Limitation Act, 1871 (c. 57), s. 3. *PURNELL v. 1568a. — — — Testatrix, who died in 1890, gave her residuary real & personal estate to two persons whom she appointed her exors. upon trust for sale & conversion, & out of the proceeds to set aside £2,000 upon trust to pay the income to L. during widow- hood & after L.'s death or marriage, to fall into residue & subject thereto gave the proceeds of sale of the residue to her six children in equal shares. L. died in 1916. An action was commenced in 1925 by persons interested in a share of residue against the personal representatives of the two exors., who were dead, claiming a declaration that certain sums of Consols & bank stock had been wrongfully expended or disposed of by or converted to the use of the exors., & an order that these sums should be replaced. Defts. alleged that these sums had been expended in 1891 in satisfying liabilities of testatrix, & pleaded the appropriate statute of limitation. The exors. had set aside sums to answer the £2,000 legacy in part, & on L.'s death payments of capital were from time to time made to the persons interested in remainder, the last payment being made in June, 1921. If the stock had been paid away in 1891, the statute of limitation afforded a good defence except in regard to the share of the £2,000 legacy, which only fell into possession in 1916: Held: (1) as the claim was against exors. holding on express trusts, it was not a claim to recover a legacy within Real Property Limitation Act, 1871 (c. 57), s. 8, & the statute of limitation applicable was Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8, under which the period for which the statute had to run in order to afford a defence was only six years; (2) the payments

PART II.—Civil Capacity.

Part VI. ---Jurisdiction in Lunacy.

529a. Jurisdiction to direct settlement of lunatic's property Change of circumstances Causing party to "suffer an injustice" Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 171 (1). | - A lunatic not so found had been of unsound mind since 1882. She was a spinster aged eighty-one, & was possessed of personal property of the value of £2,000. From the time when she became of unsound mind she had lived under the care of an uncle & aunt, who had provided £2,076 towards her maintenance. The uncle died in 1885 & the aunt in 1907. By the will of the latter an annuity of £300 was bequeathed for the support of the lunatic. Upon the death of the aunt a sister of the lunatic was appointed receiver of her estate & acted until 1920, when she was relieved & a sister of appets. was appointed in her place. On her death in 1925 one of appets. was appointed & was receiver of the lunatic's estate. In 1880 before her reason left her the lunatic made a will, by which she bequeathed her property to her three sisters, all of whom were dead. On an application by appets., the residuary legatees under the aunt's will & second cousins of the lunatic, to the ct. to exercise the powers vested in it by sect. 171 of the above Act, & to direct a settlement to be made of the property of the lunatic: Held: (1) the phrase "suffer an injustice" in sect. 171 (1) (c) must not be rigidly confined to a deprivation of a strict legal right, since that would stultify the operation of the sect. altogether, but it must in its context include the destruction of a clear moral claim, or even the disappointment of a thoroughly legitimate & well founded expectation, & in the circumstances appets. would "suffer an injustice" if the recent change in the law of intestacy were allowed to defeat the moral claim which they had to succeed to the estate of the lunatic, particularly in view of the continuous recognition, pecuniary & otherwise, which their side of the family had throughout shown of the obligations imposed on them by their kinship to the lunatic; (2) there had been "a change of circumstances" within the sub-sect. since the execution by the lunatic of her will, by reason of the deaths of her three sisters to whom she had left her property; (3) the case was one in which the ct. ought to exercise the discretion vested in it by sect. 171, by directing the receiver to execute a settlement of the property of the lunatic, to be approved by the judge in lunacy, which must be subject during the life of the lunatic to her right to be maintained out of the income, & if & so far as might be necessary out of the capital thereof, & subject also to any effective disposition by will or deed which the lunatic might make should she recover.— *Re FREEMAN, [1927] 1 Ch. 479; 96 L. ad. Estate insolvent.—(b).—A person of unsound mind had been placed in a private mental hospital at a fixed annual charge for maintenance & treatment, which had been sanctioned by an order of the ct. She died intestate, & her estate was insufficient to meet all claims. Held: payment should be made in the following order of priority: (1) funeral expenses, (2) the lunacy

"percentage": (3) the committee's costs of dismissing the matter out of lunacy; (4) arrears due to the hospital for maintenance. The assets were not sufficient to meet the payment next in priority, viz., the general costs of the committee. Re P., [1926] 1 R. 422 IR.

- 2317a. Workman with heart disease—Death from strain.]—A workman, employed in a mine, exerted himself in the ordinary course of his employment in lifting & replacing the wheels of a tub which had left the rails. He immediately complained of pain. He went to work the following day, & on his way home fell dead. Death was due to the bursting of the right auricle, owing to the walls of the heart having steadily become thinner over a period of years. Medical evidence was given to the effect that the strain of lifting would tend to make the workman's condition more critical & so lead to the collapse. The county ct. judge held the workman's death was caused by an accident, & he awarded compensation:—Held: it was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence support the finding.—*FLANAGAN v. While pulling the tub into the right position he suddenly said "Oh!" & ceased work for a moment, but, recovering, put some iron ore into the tub, when he again felt ill & stopped. He lay down, & within half an hour from his saying "Oh!" was dead. On a post mortem examination it was found that he suffered from coronary disease of the heart, which sooner or later would have caused death:—Held: death resulted from a strain incurred in the ordinary exercise of the man's work, & this amounted to an accident, as to establish an accident it was not necessary to find a sudden or special strain, & an award should be made in favour of the dependant.—*McFARLANE v. 2331a. —.—.]—A workman, employed as a ripper, was subject to the disease of osteoperiostitis, rendering his bones brittle & even liable to a spontaneous fracture, but he was able to do his work, & in 1919, by an accident whilst so employed, suffered a fracture of his right femur. He received compensation, but in 1920 resumed work, & continued so to work until 1924, when the seam on which he was employed was shut down & he ceased to work. In Aug. 1925, he was out for a walk, & after walking two or three miles & while standing still his right tibia suddenly snapped, & he claimed compensation for the injury, on the ground that it was attributable to the accident suffered by him in 1919. The medical theory advanced was that, after the injury suffered from the accident in 1919, the muscles of the leg became inelastic, & if he slipped his power of recovering himself would be affected. There was no evidence that he did slip when the tibia snapped in Aug. 1925. The county ct. judge held the injury was due to the first accident in 1919, & awarded compensation:—Held: there was no evidence to support the finding, & the award must be set aside.—*WERRIN v. He delivered the order, had his tea, & was bicycling back, but before he had called for the two orders he was knocked down by a motor lorry & injured. 2448a. ———.]—A porter, after a gate of a train had been shut, got on to the small piece of platform outside the gate to talk to the gateman, &, as the train gathered speed very quickly, was carried into the tunnel & seriously injured. He acknowledged that the only time a porter had a right to be on the platform of a train was for the purpose of removing luggage. There was also a regulation forbidding any porter to do what he was doing at the time of the accident. The county ct. judge held the accident did not arise out of the employment, & as the act that caused it was not done for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, the accident was not to be deemed to have arisen out of the employment:—Held: there was evidence to support the award, & no misdirection.—*PAINTER v. Resp. allowed him to cut turf & use it for his own purposes, & also allowed him to have the use of a horse & cart to cart the turf to his cottage. While so carting it, he was run into by a motor car & received serious injuries:—Held: the accident did not arise out of & in the course of applt.'s employment.—STANDEN v. SMITH (1927), 20 B. W. 2460b. Leaving premises to purchase provisions.—Deceased was employed as the only shop assistant in a shop, & used to have his tea in the shop & went to fetch the milk for his tea from across the road. The shop was left open during his tea hour if he liked. While crossing the road to get the milk, he was knocked down by a motor cyclist, & was killed. Deceased paid for his own milk for his tea, & it he chose to might have got his tea out:—Held: the injury having occurred at the time when deceased had left the place of & the course of his employment to get the milk for his tea at his own cost for his own purposes, the accident did not arise out of & in the course of his employment, as he was not within the test laid down in *Parker v. 2488a. Riding on engine.—The duty of C., a workman in the employ of the S. Railway, required him to go from point A. to point B. on their premises. Instead of going by a public road he proceeded to walk along the permanent way, a shorter route, in disregard of an emphatic prohibition. It was a common practice, acquiesced in by the railway's responsible officers, though forbidden by their rules, for workmen passing between A. & B. to travel on an engine if one happened to be running at a convenient time. When C. had walked about three-quarters of the distance along the line an engine going in the same direction passed him at a low speed, &, to save himself the trouble of completing the journey on foot, he attempted to mount the engine in motion, with the result that he was seriously & permanently injured. The county ct. judge found that, although the prohibition was a very real one, C. was entitled to compensation, as he was acting "for the purposes of & in connection with" the railway's business within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2):—Held: the above sub-sect. did not extend compensation to workmen who were not in their employment at all, & as C. in going into a definitely prohibited area, had gone outside his sphere of employment, he could not recover.—*CLARKE v. 2492a. ———.]—Some miners had been conveyed from their work at the face to the shaft in a train of tubs provided by the employers. Some conveyance was necessary in order to enable the men to leave the pit within the limit of seven hours permitted for each shift. Subsequently the employers provided a "spake," i.e., a train of special vehicles containing seats. On the occasion of the accident the driver in charge of the spake, for some purpose of his own, did what he had sometimes done before, namely, instead of using the spake used a train of tubs for conveying the miners, who knew that riding on tubs was prohibited, but did not complain. The train of tubs broke & overturned, & two of the miners were killed, & one was slightly injured:—Held: the prohibition was of the class that dealt with conduct within the sphere of the employment, & Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 1 (2), applied. It was necessary for the employers that the men should leave within a specified time, & the act was done for the purposes of the employers' trade or business, & compensation should be awarded to the dependants of the two miners who were killed, but not to the slightly injured miner, who was, for that reason, not covered by sect. 1 (2).—EDWARDS v. GWAUNCAEGURWEN COLLIERY CO., JAMES v. SAME, JENKINS v. SAME (1926), 96 L. J. K. B. 337; 136 L. T. 191; 20 B. W. C. C. 75, C. A.

2494a. ———. —A shunter was employed to accompany a short train & to get down to open gates, through which the train had to pass, & also to do the necessary shunting. He should have ridden in the front waggon, but used to ride by means of his coupling stick on the buffer so as to enable him to get off & on more easily. Whilst so engaged the train went over a stone & jolted him off, & the injury he received resulted in the loss of a leg. Riding on a waggon by means of a coupling pole was prohibited: Held: the prohibition was not one defining the sphere of the man's employment, though the breach of it, apart from Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 81), s. 1 (2), would have prevented the accident arising out of the employment. There was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the act done was for the purposes of & in connection with the employers' trade or business, & the accident, by sect. 1 (2), was to be deemed to arise out of the employment.—JAMES v. 2515a. Workman entering prohibited place by mistake.—A series of cubicles for electrical works were in course of being fitted up, some of which had been completed & contained live electrical machinery, & were locked. There was an express order to the workmen not to enter the completed cubicles. The cubicles being worked upon were quite close to those finished, being in the same series. The workman, a very competent man at his job, was very short-sighted, & was found electrocuted in one of the completed cubicles, he having unlocked the others. The county ct. judge drew the inference that the workman had entered a completed cubicle by mistake, & was there for the purposes of his employers' trade or business, & that the accident arose out of & in the course of his employment:

Held: there was evidence to support this inference of fact, & although the workman was acting contrary to a prohibition, the accident must be deemed to arise out of & in the course of the employment. CARTER v. BRITISH THOMSON-HOUSTON CO., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 329; 20 B. W. C. C. 331, C. A.

2552a. Drowned when using boat not provided by employer. Five sailors got leave to go on shore. The bosun said that they were not bound to be back in the ship until 6.15 a.m. A launch had been provided to take the sailors on leave to the shore & back again, & the captain told the men that the last journey to the ship by the launch would be made at 8 p.m., & that if they came back later than that, they would have to find some other means of returning to the ship. The men desired to enjoy their leave till later than 8 p.m., & tried to arrange with the man who worked the launch to come for them at 10 p.m., offering to pay him 2s. each, but the launch never came for them at 10 p.m., so they got into the first boat handy, a dinghy, & borrowed a scull with which they propelled the dinghy from the stern. The dinghy, though the men were unaware of it, was rotten & sank, the result being that three of the five men were drowned: Held: there was no contractual obligation on the deceased men to return to their ship by the boat they used, which was not provided by the employers, & as no such duty was on the men to use that boat, the accident by which they lost their lives was not in the course of performing some duty arising out of their contract of service, or, in other words, in the course of their employment. ROBERTSON v. - 3031a. ———.—] On Apr. 16, 1926, a workman fell & injured his knee. He was paid full wages, although incapacitated, until Sept. 3, when he was summarily dismissed from employment for misconduct. In the hope of being reinstated, he threatened to bring an action for wrongful dismissal, but made no claim under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), until two days after the statutory six months had expired. The county ct. judge found that the workman never intended to claim within the necessary period of six months, & there was no reasonable cause for the delay, & he refused to award compensation:—Held: the evidence supported the findings, & there was no misdirection.
- When the workman knows that the injury he suffers from was occasioned by an accident giving him a right to compensation, & fails to make a claim within six months, if that failure was prompted by his own interests, & was not induced by any action of the employer which would lead him to believe he could get compensation without making a claim, he shows no reasonable cause (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—DREWITT v. BRITANNIC ASSURANCE CO., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 511 ; 20 B. W. C. C. 434, C. A.
- 3033a. Expectation of compensation without necessity of making claim.]—In Apr. 1925, a chef severed the ligaments of his right hand in handling a dish which broke, but he continued his work at his full wages. His employers knew of the accident, but were not aware the chef could not do his full work. In July, 1926, he was dismissed, & in that month made a claim for compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman did not refrain from making a claim because he formed the view that he would receive compensation should incapacity supervene in the future without the necessity of making a claim, & that the employers did nothing to encourage such a view, & there was no reasonable cause for not making the claim within six months of the accident:—Held: there was evidence to support the findings, & no misdirection.

There would be reasonable cause for not making a claim within six months, if the workman could prove that there was a tacit understanding that the employers knew all about the possibility of a claim & were prepared to give him compensation, even though his claim might fall outside the six months (LORD HANWORTH, M.R.).—*SOYER v. The employers gave notice of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground of recovery as certified by their doctor. The workman replied with a counter-certificate of his doctor. The matter was submitted to the medical referee, who certified that the man was fit for most forms of work. The employers ceased making the weekly payments, & the workman appealed to the county ct. judge as to the effect of the certificate. The judge, sitting with the same medical referee as assessor, who explained his certificate as being one of complete recovery, held the man was fit for work on the date when compensation ceased, but awarded compensation from the date of cessation of the weekly payment to the date of his award:—Held: (1) compensation was not payable after incapacity had ceased; (2) the certificate of the medical referee was sufficient & conclusive.—*PULLEN v. 3098a. —.—.—An infant workman lost his left arm below the elbow as a result of an accident. The employers admitted liability, & paid full compensation. On Nov. 5, 1926, the workman signed a receipt for payments in the form of an agreement, by which he agreed that the payments were to be continued only so long as he was totally disabled, but that the amount of payment in respect of any subsequent partial incapacity should be settled if & when the question arose. In Jan. 1927, he applied for registration of an agreement in the terms of Form 24, that the weekly payments should continue during partial or total incapacity or until the same should be ended or diminished in accordance with 1925 Act. The employers objected to that agreement being recorded, on the ground that the terms of the real agreement of Nov. 5, 1926, were not therein correctly stated, & thereupon the workman filed a request for arbn. on Feb. 23, 1927. The boy obtained work as a messenger boy on Feb. 11, 1927. The county ct. judge ordered the document of Nov. 5 to be recorded as the agreement between the parties, & dismissed the request for arbn.:—Held: a totally incapacitated workman in receipt of full compensation under an admission of liability was entitled, either to a recorded memorandum of agreement stating his rights in the terms of Form 24, or, if the employers objected to that, he was entitled, on the question so raised, to apply in arbn. proceedings for the judge to grant an award in such terms; the document of Nov. 5 did not give the workman his full rights as expressed in Form 24, & was not binding on the workman, being an infant, & when the employers objected to the recording of a memorandum in the terms of Form 24 a question was raised fit for arbn., & an award should have been made having regard to the terms of Form 24, & there was no power on the proceedings to order a memorandum of agreement to be recorded, — the case must be remitted for the proper award to be made to suit the circumstances of the workman having actually returned to work.—*PARKER v. This was found to be unsuitable, & he was given surface work on the screens, & was paid compensation for partial incapacity. He left this work at the commencement of the stoppage due to a dispute in the coal trade in 1926, but was not re-employed at the conclusion of the stoppage, in Dec. 1926. The county ct. judge held resps. were not liable to pay compensation as claimed on the grounds set out in their particulars. The workman stated in evidence that he was afraid to work below ground again, & the county ct. judge held work at the coal face was not suitable, & the man's refusal to do it was reasonable: Held: the case must go back for the judge to decide whether the unsuitability of the work resulted from the first accident or the second, or both, & to assess the compensation payable only in regard to incapacity from the second accident. *ASTON COAL CO., LTD. v. He then obtained a situation on a trawler, until Sept., payment being on a profit-sharing basis, & his share of the profits being £21. He next worked on another trawler until Feb. 1927, payment being on the same basis, but there were no profits. On Nov. 5, 1926, he filed a request for arbn. claiming half the difference between his pre-accident wages & what he was able to earn on the trawlers on the profit-sharing basis. The employers paid a sum of money into ct. in respect of the child's allowance based on 15 per cent. of £2 a week for 780 weeks or fifteen years:—Held: the child was entitled to a sum calculated by taking 15 per cent. of £2 a week over a period from the death of the workman to the date when the child in fact would attain the age of fifteen, which, in this case, was some ten weeks more than fifteen years.—*ATHEY v. payable to the widow, & £300 for children's allowance. The total amount to which the children would have been entitled, if not limited in any way, was calculated to be £617 14s. The county ct. judge decided that the amount paid in was reasonable &, at the request of the widow, made an order for payment out of part of the amount:—Held: (1) the amount paid into ct. by the employers was insufficient, & the dependants were entitled to the full £600, since if the lump sum calculated under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 8 (2), was reduced below £300, then, if the figures warranted it, the children's allowance under sect. 8 (3) might exceed £300, provided that the lump sum & the children's allowance together did not exceed £600; (2) the widow was not deprived of her right of appeal by having accepted payment of part of the amount paid in, because, although she might have approbated the order on her own behalf, she had reprobated it in the interests of her children. (3) Seem: a request for arbn., & not an appeal, was the proper procedure for the widow.—MALCOLM v. BARBER, WALKER & CO., LTD. (1927), 137 L. T. 470; 20 B. W. C. C. 516, C. A.

The county ct. judge held the presence of the daughter over fifteen, & only partially dependent, required him to calculate the children's allowance on the basis of partial dependency:—Held: the children's allowance must be calculated on the basis of their being wholly dependent, & the existence of another member of the family over fifteen, who happened to be only partially dependent, did not affect the calculation.—*GREEN v. (1) Where a county ct. judge, upon a certificate of a medical referee that a workman who has been injured has entirely recovered & is fit for his usual employment, not containing any suggestion of the possibility of a recurrence of incapacity due to the injury at a future date, makes an order terminating the compensation, there is no jurisdiction to make a declaration of liability. (2) The fact that the certificate does not refer, one way or the other, to the possibility of future recurrence or complications, does not make it in any way ambiguous. 3571a. Consideration for agreement—Sufficiency.—An underground colliery workman left his employment in Mar. 1921, on account of illness. On July 18, 1922, he was certified to be suffering from nystagmus, the disablement, according to the certificate, being deemed to commence on that day. The workman applied for compensation, & the employers paid full compensation for total incapacity for four years, & then ceased payment. In proceedings for an award, instituted by the workman, the case was treated by both parties on the basis of an agreement to pay compensation as for total incapacity having been made, but the county ct. judge held there had been no consideration on the part of the workman for the agreement, & as the workman was not entitled to any compensation since he had not been employed by resps. during twelve months prior to the date of the certificate, the agreement was outside Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), & could not give jurisdiction within the Act: Held: there had been good consideration, inasmuch as the workman had forborne to take steps, either by applying to the certifying surgeon, or by appeal to the medical referee, to get the date of the certificate of disablement altered, & the agreement was binding upon resps., & the workman was entitled to an award.—*RIES v. 3698a. Notice of intention to end payments Validity.—A workman was injured by accident arising out of & in the course of his employment. Resps.' doctor gave his certificate that the man had partially recovered, & resps. served notice on the workman in pursuance of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, that they would cease payment of compensation within ten days. No counter-certificate by the workman's doctor was served in pursuance of the sect., but the workman filed a request for arbn. The county ct. judge awarded 8s. a week on the basis of partial incapacity from the date of the hearing in the county ct., & not from the date of termination of the weekly payment, on the ground that the workman had not complied with sect. 14, & was not entitled to compensation from that date:—Held: the notice was bad, in that it purported to end compensation when the workman was certified to be partially recovered only, & the compensation of 8s. a week for partial incapacity was payable from the date the employers ceased payment of compensation.—HOWARTH v. SINGLETON (J. E.) & SONS (1926), 20 B. W. C. C. 136, C. A.

3698b. —————[In pursuance of Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 84), s. 12 (3), resps. served a workman with notice that they would end the weekly payments, or alternatively would take him back to work, & they ceased to pay him compensation on a date which was two days short of the ten clear days required. The workman filed a request for arbn. claiming (inter alia) a declaration of liability, alleging that he was still incapacitated. Resps. offered to accept an award of a declaration of liability, & before the hearing offered the sum by which the weekly payments fell short of the proper amount that was due in respect of the two days. The county ct. judge was satisfied the workman had recovered & was able to do his work, & held, payment for the two days having been offered, there was no further liability on resps., & made the declaration of liability offered:—Held: the notice was good, & was not invalidated because the payments were not made for the full period of ten days from the date thereof.—*COOPER v. Power to terminate payments - Incapacity ceased.—On Oct. 17, 1923, a workman contracted miners' nystagmus in the course of his employment, & by voluntary agreement the employers paid him a weekly sum by way of compensation until Sept. 3, 1925, when they stopped the weekly payments, on the ground that the man had completely recovered. After the employers had commenced proceedings for a review, the workman admitted that the incapacity had ceased on Sept. 3, but claimed compensation up to the date of the award:—Held: the county ct. judge had no jurisdiction under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, to award any payment after the incapacity had ceased, & he ought to make a retrospective award terminating the weekly payments as from the date of recovery.—*OCEAN COAL CO. v. 22. "Weekly payment" — [What is.]—

In order to make a payment a "weekly payment under the principal Act" within Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (c. 42), s. 14, it must be shown (a) that there was an admission, express or implied, of liability under the Act, & (b) that the payment was made in respect of that admission.

money to a workman, who signed a receipt bearing that the payment was made without an admission of liability on their part:—Held: as it did not appear that the payment complied with the above requirements, sect. 14 did not apply.—*LAFFERTY v. On receipt of their doctor's report that the workman was fit for light work, the employers made two offers of light work to the workman at the same rate of wages as before his accident. After the second refusal, the employers ceased to pay compensation. The county ct. judge held the workman was unreasonable in refusing the offers of light work &, applying Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies, No. 3701, ante, the employers were entitled to stop payment of compensation when they did: — Held: the evidence supported the findings, & the judge had correctly applied Ocean Coal Co. v. Davies, No. 3701, ante. LOWE v. ESSEX COUNTY COUNCIL (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 452, C. A.

3702a. ———.]— A workman met with an accident, which he alleged caused an inguinal swelling. He was paid full compensation until Sept. 20, 1926, when the payments were reduced. The workman filed an application claiming compensation at the old rate, & the employers filed a counter-application for termination of compensation. The county ct. judge found that the workman had entirely recovered on Sept. 20, 1926, & that the swelling from which he suffered at the date of the trial was not a result of the accident, & made an award for the employers on both applications: Held: the employers, by paying compensation, were not estopped from saying that the injury was not caused by the accident, & there was evidence to support the judge's findings, & no misdirection.—THORPE v. SADLER (A. L.) & SON, SADLER (A. L.) & SON v. THORPE (1927), 20 B. W. C. C. 488, C. A.

Ultimately a doctor reported that pltf. had recovered, & defts. stopped the payments & applied for a review thereof, & paid into ct., with a denial of liability, the amount of the weekly payments up to that date. While the county ct. proceedings were still pending, pltf. brought an action, alleging that he had not recovered from his injury, & claiming (1) a declaration that under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1925 (c. 81), s. 12, defts. had committed a breach of their duty by stopping the payments otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement or arbn., & (2) an injunction restraining a continuance of the breach: — Held: under sect. 21 the only tribunal to determine the question of incapacity was the county ct., &, as that question had not yet been determined by that tribunal, pltf. could not show that his incapacity was continuing since the date when defts. stopped the weekly payments, & the action failed. CATTON v. ASHWELL & NESBIT, LTD. (1927), 44 T. L. R. 130.

3766a. Particulars Contents of.] Upon an application by an employer to review a weekly payment & diminish it, or terminate or diminish it, the appropriate form is Form 5, under which certain particulars are to be given. These do not include particulars of the extent to which diminution is asked for, but the county ct. judge has a discretion to order or to refuse such further particulars under r. 29 (2). His decision on the point is not a decision on a question of law, & there is no appeal therefrom. Seemle: such particulars ought to be sparingly ordered, & not with the object of compelling the county ct. judge to give costs to one side or the other, & there is much greater reason for asking for particulars of the extent of diminution of a weekly payment where termination is not asked for, than where the employer is asking for termination or diminution. *VICKERS, LTD. v. Certificate incomplete—Death of certifying surgeon—Subsequent certificate by successor—Validity.]—On July 12, 1926, eighteen months after the workman had left his employment, Dr. S., the certifying surgeon of the district, certified that the workman was suffering from lead poisoning. The certificate did not comply with the regulations as no date of disablement was filled in, nor were the words "I certify that the disablement commenced on the day of " struck out. Before the workman could see Dr. S. to have the omission put right the doctor died. After Dr. F. had been appointed in his place the workman, on Aug. 12, 1926, obtained a certificate from him in which the date of disablement was filled in as Nov. 23, 1924. In answer to the workman's request for arbn., based on Dr. F.'s certificate, the employers denied liability to pay compensation on the ground that, as Dr. S.'s certificate did not specify the date of disablement, such date was deemed to be the date of the certificate, & was final & conclusive, & Dr. F.'s certificate was accordingly invalid, & as the workman had not been in their employment for more than twelve months prior to that date of disablement, he could not recover compensation. The county ct. judge upheld that contention:—Held: the first certificate was incomplete in that it had not dealt with the date of disablement in either manner provided by the regulations & was invalid, & the workman, not being able by reason of the death of Dr. S. to have the matter put in order, was entitled to rely on the second certificate.—*POWELL v. - 3821a. ———.]—A certificate was given by the certifying surgeon that a workman was suffering from lead poisoning. A leading symptom of the disease was stated on the form to be dupuytren's contraction. Full compensation was paid until an application by the employers to review the weekly payments. The workman was still incapacitated by dupuytren's contraction. The county ct. judge refused to treat the certificate as conclusive as to dupuytren's contraction being a symptom of lead poisoning, & on contradictory medical evidence given at the hearing, & also on knowledge he had acquired some years before while sitting on a commission to consider industrial diseases, including dupuytren's contraction, held the symptoms, though still the same as those set out in the certificate, were not due to the certified disease, & reduced the compensation to 1d. a week. The case involved a point of law, & early in the hearing, counsel called attention to that fact, but the judge omitted to take any notes of the proceedings:—Held: (1) the certificate that the symptoms were due to the certified disease was conclusive, & evidence to the contrary was inadmissible, & there was no evidence of any new factor or new disease to support an award in reduction of compensation. - 3860a. Effect of agreement for compensation—Facts as to agreement not presented in county court.]—On an application for review & redemption of weekly payments a workman alleged that he had negotiated with persons representing a new co. which had taken over the business of his employers, & the new co. had agreed to pay him £850 in full settlement of his claims. The county ct. judge had previously decided in a similar case that the workman could not rely upon such an agreement with the new co., as such agreement was only with a third party, & not with his employers. The parties treated the case as governed by that decision, & the question of the agreement was not gone into at the hearing. The application was then proceeded with as an application for review & the judge held the workman had recovered, & by his award stopped further weekly payments. The workman appealed, on the ground that the judge could not terminate the payments in view of the agreement:—Held: (1) the ct. could not entertain an appeal as to the effect of the agreement, as the facts as to that agreement had not been presented in the county ct., & there were no materials before the ct. on which they could come to a decision; (2) the question whether the workman had recovered was a question of fact, as to which there was evidence to support the finding, & there was no misdirection.—EAST KENT COLLIERY CO. v. 59a. —.]—In Mar. 1926, defts. carried out demolition work on premises adjoining other premises, called X., under a limited licence given by the owners of premises X. One of the conditions of the licence was that defts. should make good all damage done to premises X. by reason of the demolition operations. In the course of the operations defts. allowed debris to drop on an inaccessible part of the roof of premises X. & did not remove all the debris therefrom when the demolition work was completed. In July plff. became the occupier of premises X. under a lease. In Sept. a heavy storm of rain washed the debris which had been left by defts. on the roof of premises X. into the gutters on the roof, & a gully was choked & the basement of premises X. was flooded, & goods which plff. kept there were damaged. In an action by plff. claiming damages for defts.' negligence :—Held : there could be no negligence, as there was no duty on the part of defts. towards plff.—KONSKIER v. Injunction to restrain acceptance—Lawful ground of objection “Secret processes.”—

Where an injunction had been granted to restrain appct. for a patent from disclosing processes derived from pltf. co., or from doing any act which might cause same to become public or commonly known, & the Comptroller-General refused to undertake when he should receive an application for the acceptance of a complete specification to consider such injunction a “lawful ground of objection” to the acceptance of the complete specification within Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 7 (3), objecting to his duty prescribed by the Patent Acts being in any way interfered with by the ct., the ct. granted an injunction restraining the Comptroller-General from accepting the complete specification, as under sect. 9, on such acceptance, the matter would be thrown open to public inspection, the specification being concerned with some of the processes which, as between pltf. co. & appct., appct. had been restrained from disclosing, & because the Comptroller-General might accept the complete specification on the footing that the injunction against appct. would not constitute a lawful ground of objection within sect. 7 (3). On appeal the S.-G. on behalf of the Comptroller-General undertook that the injunction granted against appet. would be properly considered in deciding whether the specification should be accepted as being something which might constitute "a lawful ground of objection" to such acceptance, & by consent the order against the Comptroller-General was discharged, notice of discontinuance to be served upon him. Appet. was also further restrained from proceeding with his application in addition to the injunction granted against him in the ct. below.—REX CO. & REX RESEARCH CORPN. v. MUIRHEAD & COMPTROLLER-GENERAL OF PATENTS (1926), 96 L. J. Ch. 121; 136 L. T. 568; 41 R. P. C. 38, C. A.

- 1673a. — — — — — (1) No action for a declaration of the validity of a patent, or for compensation for user of the invention by the Crown, against the Govt. department concerned is competent or open to the patentee under Patents & Designs Act, 1919 (c. 80), s. 8, if the Crown do not consent to its being dealt with in proceedings under sect. 8, but the remedy is by petition of right or by originating notice of motion addressed to the department. The true effect of sect. 8 is to give merely a right of compensation to the patentee against the Crown for the use by its officers of his invention for the purposes of the Crown, & it does not give any right in itself to sue the department concerned.
- (2) A claim for a declaration of the validity of the patent is not a claim in tort because the Crown has the right to use the patent on the statutory terms set out in sect. 8.
